ἡ σπουδὴ οὐκ ἔξω ἀμαρτίας εἶναι, ἀλλὰ θεὸν εἶναι. PLOTINUS.

This is that mystic religion which, though it has nothing in it but that same spirit, that same truth, and that same life, which always was and always must be the religion of all God's holy angels and saints in heaven, is by the wisdom of this world accounted to be madness. LAW.

But I'll pour floods of love and hide myself.

PREFACE.

ABOUT six years ago, when I consulted Professor Robertson Smith, whose kindness and heroic unselfishness none of his pupils can ever forget, as to what I should make the subject of the dissertation expected from candidates for a Trinity Fellowship, he suggested the Divani Shamsi Tabriz, in other words, the lyrical poetry of Jalalu'ddin Rumi. I was the more ready to follow his advice as the Sufi doctrines had even then begun to inspire me with the strange and irresistible fascination which a religion of love and beauty exercises over certain minds. Accordingly, Mr E. G. Browne having lent me his copy of the Tabriz Edition of the Divan, I worked through it page by page, selecting the poems that pleased me best and translating them in prose or verse. The present volume is an outcome of that experiment. It is not, however, merely a réchauffé. My original dissertation was based upon a single text and left many difficulties unsolved. In 1894 I collated a splendid manuscript of the Dīvan preserved in the Vienna Hofbibliothek, and on my return I examined one of equal importance, which the authorities of the Leyden University Library generously placed at my disposal. The texts thus obtained I have corrected and supplemented by reference to MSS. in the British Museum and elsewhere. As regards interpretation also much has been gained. In a wider knowledge of Sūfi literature, and especially of the Maṣnawī, I found the key to passages which seemed hopelessly obscure. The comparative method may be abused; its value is beyond dispute. Sūfiism has few ideas, but an inexhaustible wealth and variety of illustration. Among a thousand fluttering masks the interpreter is required to identify each old familiar face. Now one mask reveals more than another, and when that has been penetrated, its neighbour can no longer dissemble the likeness which hitherto remained unrecognised. I do not, of course, pretend to have understood everything: Sūfiism is neither an exact science nor a popular history of the Creation. This enigmatic and ambiguous style, of which the Divān is a masterpiece, will always leave ample room for conjecture, even though its chief characters are easily deciphered. I trust that my explanatory notes, if occasionally they prove to be beside the mark, may nevertheless contribute to a better appreciation of the greatest mystical poet of any age.

While the Maṣnawī is accessible in the scholarly abstract of Mr Whinfield and the laborious but amazingly unpoetical version of Bk. I. by Sir James Redhouse, the Divān, scarcely inferior in merit or fame, has been less fortunate. There is no English edition; Austria has given us Rosenzweig's Auswahl (1838), and the clumsy translations of Von Hammer in his Schöne Redekünste Persiens. For a notice of both the reader is referred to the Introduction. I have included three odes which appear in the Auswahl; the rest are now published in Europe for the first time. The task of selection was not a simple one, and I have necessarily relied on my own taste and feeling. If my book were not addressed to students of Persian rather than to lovers of literature, I should have been tempted to imitate Abū 'Tammām, whose Hamāsa is a compilation of verses torn from their context. Such a plan is peculiarly favoured by the loose structure of the ghazal, where couplets complete in themselves are strung together in the slightest fashion. But as no writer can fairly be judged by fragments, however fine, I have endeavoured to make this anthology a true and sufficient reflexion of the whole Dīvān.

My translation seeks to reconcile the claims of accuracy and art : it is therefore in prose. Obviously English verse cannot convey the full verbal sense of oriental poetry without lapsing into grotesque doggerel ; the translator must either profess a general adherence to his author's meaning (see Appendix II.) or, rising above the letter, he must catch the elusive spirit of his original and reproduce it in a worthy form. Of this, the highest and rarest kind of translation, Fitzgerald's 'Omar Khayyām is a classic example. I have done my best to avoid gratuitous banalities, when no misapprehension was possible. Thus I have not rendered ṣaffi ni'āl by 'shoe-rack,' nor have I described a burning heart as 'roast-meat.' Although some Persian compounds can hardly be englished except by coining equivalent terms, I have taken warning from the sad fate of more than one inventor. 'Nubiquity' and 'nulliquity' are terrible epitaphs.

Finally, my warmest thanks are due to Professor Cowell, who lent me his two manuscripts of the Dīvān ; to Mr E. G. Browne, who since I began to study Persian has never grudged me the benefit of his unrivalled knowledge and experience ; to Mr G. Lowes Dickinson, who permitted me to make use of an unpublished dissertation on Plotinus ; and above all to Professor Bevan, who not only read the proof-sheets throughout but assisted me with many ingenious and important suggestions.

I would also declare my obligation to the staff of the Cambridge University Press for the admirable way in which they have printed a very troublesome text.

INTRODUCTION.

§ 1. THE Dīvān Shamsi Tabrīz acquaints us with a striking literary phenomenon¹. It is true that books have been ascribed by ambition or malice to those who had no hand in producing them. It is true, again, that while the fashion of pseudonymous authorship is everywhere understood and practised, in Persia the poet à la mode cannot dispense with a takhalluṣ, which instead of exciting curiosity and sparing modesty a blush serves to gratify the generous patron, to immortalise a place or event, to unfold some characteristic, and in fine to secure that its owner shall not for all time lie buried under one of those cumbrous family trees that betray alike the poverty and confusion of Mohammedan nomenclature. But here is no question of takhalluṣ², forgery, or composition holding up to ridicule the imagined author. The Dīvān was never attributed to Shamsi Tabrīz, who probably died before it was complete. Why then does his name appear on the title-page and at the end of most of the odes? Who was he, and in what

We may pass lightly over the apocryphal genealogy which connects him with Abū Bekr, the first Caliph. His descent, on the mother's side, from the royal house of Khwarazm is well established. Jalālu 'ddīn Husain Al-Khatībī married a daughter of 'Alā 'u 'ddīn Muḥammad Khwārazm-Shāh. Their son, Bahā 'u 'ddīn Walad, is the poet's father.

Bahā 'u 'ddīn was a man of great learning and piety, an eloquent preacher and distinguished professor. Unfortunately, not content with 'declaiming against the philosophers and rationalists of the day,' he seems to have indulged in political diatribes. According to Aflakī, he attacked the 'innovations' of the reigning monarch, Muḥammad Kutbu 'ddīn Khwārazm-Shāh, surnamed Takash, who held sway in the north-east of Persia and in Transoxania. From Nīshāpūr they went to Baghdad, where they received news of the destruction of Balkh by Jingīz Khān (608 A.H.); then to Mecca, Damascus, and Malaṭiya (Melitene). Four years were spent at Arzanjān in Armenia, and seven at Laranda. Here Jalāl 'ddīn married Jauhar Khātūn², daughter of the Lālā Sharafu 'ddīn of Samarcand (623 A.H.). Soon afterwards the family settled in Qōniya (Iconium), the capital of the Seljūq prince, 'Alā 'u 'ddīn Kaikubād, and Bahā 'u 'ddīn resumed his professorial activity under the royal patronage.

If we can believe the stories which are told of him, the poet must indeed have been a 'marvellous boy.' He was educated first by his father and then by Burhānu 'ddīn Muḥaqqiq 'Tirmidhī, who was a pupil of Bahā 'u 'ddīn at Balkh. On his father's death (628 A.H.) Jalāl succeeded to the vacant chair³. of his erudition and the brilliancy of his eloquence brought eager disciples from every quarter to his feet—he had a class of 400—the positive sciences could not, he felt, satisfy the soul's infinite longing for freedom and rest. He embraced accordingly the pantheistic doctrines which had early taken root in the barren soil of Islām, and sown broadcast over the Mohammedan empire by a long series of wandering saints, sprang up and blossomed with oriental luxuriance.

¹ So Aflākī and Jāmī. But Rizā Kulī asserts (T. 4. 10) that Jalāl was 62 years of age when Shamsi Tabriz first came to Qōniya. This date (666 A.H.) is apparently confirmed by a passage in the Divān (T. 244. 1):

Forty years did Reason plunge me in care;

At three score and two I was made a prey and eschewed
(worldly) meditation.

[See the original in Appendix I. F (c).] On the other hand Shamsi Tabriz is addressed in Bk. I. of the Maṣnavī, and we know that Bk. II. was commenced in 662 A.H.

² See p. xvi, note. The tedious account in the Jawāhiru 'l Asrār (a commentary on the first three books of the Maṣnavī by Kamālu 'ddīn Ḥusain of Khwārazm) adds little to our knowledge, and the same remark applies to the Majālisu 'l 'Ushshāq (Ouseley, Notices of Persian Poets, p. 247).

³ در اثنای مسافرت (Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 537, l. 3). He had been sent by his spiritual teacher, Ruknu 'ddīn Sanjāsī, to seek Jalāl in the land of Rūm (Daulat Shāh). Aflākī's description of their meeting agrees in the main with that of Jāmī. Daulat Shāh gives a somewhat different version.

Even his parentage is uncertain. Some declare that his father, Khāwand 'Alā 'u 'ddīn', claimed descent from 'Kiyā Buzurgumīd'. 'Alā 'u 'ddīn abandoned his ancestral sect (the Ismā'ilīs), burned their books and tracts, preached Islām in the strongholds of heresy², and privily sent Shamsu 'ddīn, a youth of rare beauty³, to receive his education at Tabrīz. According to others he was born in Tabrīz, where his father carried on the trade of a cloth-merchant (بزاز)⁴. He is said to have studied under Bābā Kamāl Jundī, Abū Bakr Sila-bāf, and Ruknu 'ddīn Sanjāsī⁵. He had travelled

³ Hence he got the nickname, Nau Musalmān or Bū Musalmān (the MSS. vary).

⁵ Jāmī, who gives the full name of Shamsi Tabrīz as شمس الدین محمد بن علی بن ملکداد تبریزی, has followed this tradition.

much; whence he obtained the sobriquet, Paranda (the Flier). His character was despotic and overbearing; he was extremely bitter in his sermons, and likened his learned auditors to oxen and asses. Perhaps this may be the cause why Dr Sprenger calls him 'a most disgusting cynic'.¹ He was comparatively illiterate², but his tremendous spiritual enthusiasm, based on the conviction that he was a chosen organ and mouth-piece of Deity, cast a spell over all who entered the enchanted circle of his power. In this respect, as in many others, for example, in his strong passions, his poverty, and his violent death, Shamsi Tabriz curiously resembles Socrates; both imposed themselves upon men of genius, who gave their crude ideas artistic expression; both proclaim the futility of external knowledge, the need of illumination, the value of love; but wild raptures and arrogant defiance of every human law can ill atone for the lack of that 'sweet reasonableness' and moral grandeur which distinguish the sage from the devotee.

accessible isolation was quickly overshadowed, if not dethroned, in the hearts of its worshippers, by the dei minores (daemons, angels, heroes and the like) forming a luminous staircase between earth and Heaven. These subordinate hierarchies, more or less remote from the divine Essence, seemed to offer a practicable hope, even a measure of responsive sympathy: anything was better than blank infinite negation. So with the Ṣūfīs. Professing to adore a universal abstraction, they make individual men the objects of their real worship. ‘Among the religious-philosophical sects of the period in which our poet lived the doctrine was generally held, that Man, if he be left to his own devices, will inevitably go astray: therefore he must choose a Master to guide him in the right path¹.’ The Master (پیر) is God’s representative, his actions are God’s actions, in spirit he is one with God. His blasphemies and immoralities, nay, his very crimes, are not only condoned but glorified: darkness cannot proceed from the sun, nor evil from God. What we call evil is intrinsically good, though it seems imperfect in relation to ourselves. The mischievous effect of such theories on vulgar and uneducated minds need hardly be pointed out. ‘Alī, Ja‘far Ṣādiq, Abū Muslim, and innumerable others, were regarded as incarnations of the Godhead. Hasan Ṣabbāḥ was flattered by his adherents with divine honours and a fanatical devotion that braved the worst tortures of impotent revenge. While we readily acquit Jalālu ‘ddīn of sharing this extravagant materialism, which indeed he is at pains to discountenance, we must confess that his language is sometimes ambiguous. For instance, in the last beyt of one of his ghazals he says, referring to Shamsi Tabriz :

آن پادشاهِ اعظم در بسته بود مُحَكَّم

(T. 180. 2) پوشیده دلقِ آدمِ امروز بر در آمد

That monarch supreme had shut the door fast;
To-day he has come to the door, clothed in the garment of mortality.

The pretensions of Shamsi Tabriz himself may be judged by an anecdote in the Manāqibu 'l 'Ārifīn. One day a person met him in the market-place and exclaimed, "There is no god save God; Shamsu 'ddīn is the apostle of God." The people, on hearing this, raised a great hubbub, and wished to kill him, but Shams intervened and led him away, remarking: "My good friend, my name is Muḥammad. Thou shouldst have shouted, 'Muḥammad is the apostle of God.' The rabble will not take gold that is not coined¹."

§ 5. How utter was Jalāl's self-abandonment, how complete his submission to the glowing faith and imperious will of his new friend, Aflākī informs us: Shamsu 'ddīn demanded and received the obedience due to a sultān from the meanest of his slaves. To quote the vivid words of Rīzā Kulī, 'he (Jalāl) was so transported and smitten², that for a time he was thought insane.' He renounced his teaching, and retired with Shams to solitary and desert places, where in close communion they discussed the deepest arcana of mystical philosophy.

∴ Bitterly resenting what they conceived to be an insidious attempt to seduce their beloved Master from the true religion, Jalāl's scholars and disciples assailed the unwelcome visitor with abuse, if not with actual violence. Shams fled to Tabriz. Thither he was followed by his convert, who brought him back in triumph, but soon a fresh outbreak of persecution caused him to undertake a journey 'to Damascus', where he stayed for two years. He was passionately regretted by Jalāl, who bade the musicians chant songs of love and engaged, day and night, in the samā'. Most of his ghazals were composed during this period of separation. Here the course of events becomes obscure. Apparently Jalāl, unable to forego the society of his dearest friend, sent his son, Sultān Walad, to Damascus, charged with the task of finding Shams and recalling him to Qōniya. Soon after his return he vanished mysteriously. Most authorities agree that he was put to death: only the cause and manner of it are disputed².

If he is in Damascus, what mornings will appear!

(I have not tried to reproduce the play on شمس and on the double sense of شام).

² Aflākī says that he was put to death 'without inquiry or formality' by the Sultan's police (Redhouse's Maṣnavī, p. 108), but the motive alleged is absurdly inadequate. Daulat Shāh mentions another story, that one of Jalālu 'ddīn's disciples (فرزند از فرزندان) 'threw down a wall on his head,' adding, however, that this (مولانا

That any of the extant versions is founded on knowledge seems highly improbable; they may be described as legends begotten by the credulous imagination of the dervish, stamped on the floating currency of popular superstition, and accepted by the biographer without scruple. • The following is Jāmi's account: 'One evening Shaikh Shamsu 'ddīn and Maulānā (Jalālu 'ddīn) were sitting in private, when somebody outside desired the Shaikh to come forth immediately. He rose, saying to Maulānā, "I am called to my death." After a long pause, "Verily," said Maulānā, "His is the whole creation and the empire thereof. Blessed be God, the lord of all creatures!"' Seven conspirators were lying in ambush and fell upon him with knives, but the Shaikh uttered so terrible a cry that they all were dumbfounded. One of them was 'Alā 'u 'ddīn, Maulānā's son, who bore the brand of "*He is not of thy people*²." When they recovered their senses, they saw nothing except a few drops of blood. From that day to the present time no trace of that spiritual monarch has appeared. This happened in the year 645. Each of the aforementioned villains was speedily involved in calamity and perished. 'Alā 'u 'ddīn Muḥammad was overtaken by a strange disease and died ere the murder was many days old. Maulānā did not attend his funeral. Some say that Shaikh Shamsu 'ddīn is buried beside Maulānā Bahā 'u 'ddīn Walad, but according to another report these villains threw his blessed body into a well. One night Sultān Walad dreamed that Shaikh Shamsu 'ddīn signified to him that he was asleep in this well. When midnight came, he gathered his intimate friends, and they interred Shams in Maulānā's college by the side of the founder, Amīr Badru 'ddīn. And God knoweth best¹.'

In memory of his teacher Jalāl is said to have instituted the order of Maulavī dervishes 'with their special dress, the Indian garb of mourning,' and their whirling dance (سماع). Rīzā Kūlī implies that the Dīvān itself was written *in memoriam*². The Maṣnavī was commenced later at the instigation of Chelebī Ḥusāmu 'ddīn³. Jalāl is also the author of a treatise in prose, entitled Fīhi mā fīhi, 'which runs to three thousand beyts and is addressed for the most part to Mu'īnu 'ddīn⁴, the Parwāna of Rūm. Manuscripts of this work are rare.'

'Jalāl died at Qōniya on the 5th of Jumādā 'l Ākhir, 672 A.H. (16th December, 1273).

² This may be inferred from the sequence of his narrative (T. 4. 13—14). We have seen that part of the Dīvān was composed while Shamsi Tabrīz was still living, but probably the bulk of it belongs to a later period, and not, as Daulat Shāh asserts, to the two years when Shamsu 'ddīn was staying at Damascus.

the mystic terminology, 'adopté par une secte pour cacher aux profanes la connaissance de ses dogmes,' serve the function of a mask or a lady's fan in the last century. By tantalising the reader, by keeping him, as it were, suspended between matter and spirit, they pique his ingenuity and double his pleasure. Nearly every line is a play of wit. Love, Wine, and Beauty are painted in the warmest, the most alluring colours, but with such nicety of phrase that often the same ode will entrance the sinner and evoke sublime raptures in the saint. The majority, however, are themselves Sūfis by profession or conviction. 'The real basis of their poetry is a loftily inculcated ethical system, which recognises in purity of heart, charity, self-renunciation, and bridling of the passions, the necessary conditions of eternal happiness. Attached to this we find a pantheistic theory of the emanation of all things from God, and their ultimate reunion with Him. Although on the surface Islām is not directly assailed, it sustains many indirect attacks, and frequently the thought flashes out, that all religions and revelations are only the rays of a single eternal Sun; that all Prophets have only delivered and proclaimed in different tongues the same principles of eternal goodness and eternal truth which flow from the divine Soul of the world'.¹

¹ A. von Kremer, Geschichte der herrschenden Ideen des Islāms, p. 257. The advanced and uncompromising Sūfism taught by Jalālū 'ddīn makes ethics subservient to philosophy. Virtue, as he conceives it, is not an end, but a means: the end is union with God through Love. Thus his poetry is based on a transcendental pantheism, which however he works out from the moral, not the metaphysical, standpoint.

Among these, the genuine Ṣūfī poets, Jalālu 'ddīn Rūmī is without a rival.

While the vexed problem as to the origin of Ṣūfism does not call for discussion here, a few remarks concerning its historical development and the various elements of which it is composed may be helpful to the student, who will find an admirable summary of the doctrine in Whinfield's editions of the Maṣnavī and *Gulshani Rāz*¹.

The early Ṣūfis—they were not yet distinguished by this name—showed, perhaps under Jewish and Christian influence, a strong tendency to asceticism. Self-control, self-sacrifice, patience, boundless trust in God, all the virtues of a Bernard and a Thomas à Kempis, animate their zealous and devout, if somewhat narrow and practical, aspiration. They were not in opposition to Islām, but formed an extreme wing of the orthodox party. The pantheistic extravagances in which full-blown Ṣūfism delights are foreign or at least unfamiliar to them. With Rābi'a, a pious woman who died at Jerusalem (135 A. H.), Love, the unquenchable flame smouldering in the ashes of ceremonial religion and kindling the torch of mysticism through the darkest ages, began its conquest of Moham-medan hearts. The first who bore the name of Ṣūfī was Abū Hāshim (ob. 150 A. H.), and in his lifetime or soon afterwards the first convent for Ṣūfis (خانقاه) was founded at Ramla, in Palestine, by a Christian Amīr.

This ascetic type belongs especially to the Arab race.

¹ Broadly speaking, the views expressed in the following paragraphs are those of A. von Kremer (see note above), who has drawn his materials almost exclusively from Arabic sources. For insight and suggestiveness his account of Ṣūfism remains unsurpassed.

Hand in hand with the Persian revival under the 'Abbāsids came a new current of ideas. Speculation takes a bolder flight and essays to reconcile the creature with his Creator, to bridge the chasm between the finite and the Infinite. Dhū 'l Nūn (ob. 245 A.H.) is said to have introduced the doctrine of ecstasies (احوال) and mystical stages (مقامات), and Sirrī Saqaṭī (ob. 253 A.H.) that of unification (تَوْحِيد). According to Jāmī (Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 36, ll. 2—6): 'Dhū 'l Nūn is the head of this sect; they all are derived from, and connected with, him'. There were eminent spiritualists before him, but he was the first to interpret symbolic expressions (اشارات با عبارت آورد) and to discourse on Sūfism. Junaid (ob. 297 A.H.) systematised and developed this knowledge, and composed writings on the subject. Shiblī (ob. 334 A.H.) carried it to the pulpit and proclaimed it openly.' In 309 A.H. Mansūr Hallāj was executed for asserting his identity with God². But the word had been spoken. Henceforth Sūfism is frankly pantheistic. The terms زهد and تَصَوُّف have now scarce anything in common; the عابد is succeeded by the عارف. There survives, indeed, a small group of moderates who, in outward conformity with Islām, are none the less effectually undermining its foundations. The main body, grasping at a glorious phantom, follow their principles to the logical issue. For these free-thinkers Islām, however they might lean upon it, was a broken reed. Scorning the barren virtues of the cloister, 'the base degrees by which they did ascend,' admitting no guidance but the pole-star of divine illumination, they press in wild career to the very brink of madness. As citizens they are undeniably a grave scandal and a useless burden to the state; they sap the national prosperity¹ and demoralise the national character; but if a country's literature is rightly reckoned among its noblest heirlooms, the debt which Persia owes to the Šūfis may balance, and perhaps overpay, these injuries.

Šūfiism, then, is no exotic growth, but shoots up like a tender plant in the desert. It is a child of the soil, called into being by the deeper and truer religious spirit which the dry monotheism and stubborn dogmas of the Kor'ān had stifled. We have seen how in the 3rd century it began to take a wider range. The rapid expansion of the Mohammedan empire brought about a corresponding diffusion of culture. Greek philosophy was introduced²; Aristotle, coloured by Alexandrian commentators, appeared in Arabic. Šūfiism, moreover, had its organised mendicants, who travelled to every part of the eastern world. Often these wanderers were men of active and ingenious minds. They gathered much besides their daily alms:

their mysterious lore would be eagerly communicated and in due course would swell the public stock of unrecorded tradition. In this way Zoroastrian, Buddhistic, Christian, and other elements may have gained entrance. Probably the Shi'ite sects, e.g. the Ismā'ilis, with their fantastic notions of a hidden Imām, their theories of incarnation and emanation, and their abuse of allegory, contributed something in return for what they borrowed. Sūfism, pure in its origin, became eclectic ere reaching its prime.

§ 7. Our data are not yet sufficient to let us trace with certainty the derivation of Sūfī doctrine. Such an attempt would in any case be accompanied by almost insuperable difficulties. The identity of two beliefs does not prove that one is generated by the other: they may be results of a like cause. Even where connexion¹ is assured, it may be impossible to show which is the ancestor and which the descendant. Moreover, since all manifestations of the mystical spirit are fundamentally the same, in so far as each is not modified by its peculiar environment and by the positive religion to which it clings for support, we shall not be astonished to encounter in remote lands and different ages of the world 'one set of principles variously combined.' I propose to illustrate this parallelism with regard to the chief doctrines of Jalālu 'ddīn and Plotinus. Although the name of Plotinus was unknown in the East¹, his philosophy, made popular by his immediate successors and reflected in Aristotelian commentaries, had considerable influence upon the kindred oriental system. The idea of emanation, or rather the particular form of it exhibited in Ṣūfism, proceeded, if we are not mistaken, from the Neoplatonic mint. Ṣūfī metaphysics—naturally the product of mature speculation—are cast throughout in the mould which Alexandria aptly contrived to satisfy at once the despairing credulity and devotional enthusiasm of the time. This resemblance, extending also to practical ethics, would be still more striking, were it not disguised by a total contrast of expression. What Plotinus states tersely and baldly Jalālu 'ddīn throws into an obscure allegory: he 'implies things,' but seldom utters them. It has already been remarked that Jalālu 'ddīn approaches his subject on the moral side, and while he makes no pretence to logical and coherent exposition, in his brief metaphysical flights he is so vague, fanciful, and allusive, that the depth of his acquaintance with Greek and Arabian philosophy cannot be definitely fixed. Nevertheless, if we fairly interpret these oracular deliverances in the light afforded by Ṣūfī authors and commentators, the following sketch of Neoplatonism will be found to contain little or nothing that Jalālu 'ddīn has not presented, after his own fashion, to readers of the Maṣnavī and *Dīvān*¹.

The aim of Plotinus is to achieve perfect union with God. Assuming the reality of a supernatural over against the material world, he has to show (a) the relation existing between them, (b) the means whereby he may ascend.

(a) 'The one watchword in the new Platonic philosophy is *continuity*¹.' There shall be no impassable gulf dividing God from Man, spirit from matter : they shall be the first and last links of a single chain.

Thus we have, according to Plotinus,

(1) Absolute Unity (τὸ ἓν)², the ground of all being, the highest Thought, the highest Good, the highest Beauty. Nay, it is something above all these. It is inconceivable, and therefore ineffable ; it can only be expressed by negation³.

(2) Universal Mind (νοῦς)⁴, the eldest offspring of the One, which it eternally contemplates. It is inferior to the One, for thought involves duality. It is the home of the Ideas⁵ and the true archetype of the phenomenal world⁶.

(3) Universal Soul (ψυχή)⁷, begotten by νοῦς and connecting it with the world of sense. She has thus a double nature. As the heavenly Aphrodite¹, she receives the overflowing radiance of νοῦς, which, as an earthly goddess, she communicates to the region below.

This region is the material world. Matter (ὕλη) is absence of Form (εἶδος)², mere defect and privation (στέρησις)³. Nothing in itself, it is yet the mirror of all things⁴. It is also Evil, being utterly devoid of the Good (ἔλλειψις τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ)⁵.

But why, we may ask, should plurality issue from the inmost seclusion of the One? Plotinus answers that every perfect being desires to create another⁶. The One remains, indeed, unmoved and undiminished: its substance suffers no change, but its redundant energy streams over (οἶον ὑπερρύη). He compares this process to the sap coursing through a tree, or to 'the sunbeams which illumine the atmosphere'. Thus all things partake of God in proportion as they approximate to the divine centre; all strive upward to that Unity without which they would not exist², and of this strife the Universe is born³.

⁵ The views of Plotinus concerning Evil coincide to an amazing degree with those expressed by Jalālu 'ddīn. Cf. Whinfield's Maṣnavi, p. xx seq., Zeller, iii.², p. 502 seqq.

(b) The soul in her primeval state belongs to the World-Soul⁴. Going forth from Eternity and passing the frontiers of the Intelligible, she enters the realm of Matter, not by an act of will, but in obedience to an instinctive necessity⁵. As embodied she is a part of Nature, as

³ Accordingly, the phenomenal world is a dream of the soul, a subjective entity (امرِ اعتباری). Cf. T. 25. 13:

The soul, like Narcissus, made of herself an idol and desired to embrace it (cf. 'Atṭār's fable of the fox, Saʿfismus, p. 119). Egoism no less than Fate is the cause of her fall. Plotinus agrees with Jalālu 'ddīn that Man has freewill, though his freedom is subordinate to eternal law. In so far as he yields to the sensual he is not free: his freedom spiritual she still firmly plants her foot in the ideal world'. She is fallen, but not irretrievably: 'the ancient track' lies open, if she will tread it. Return (ἐπιστροφή) sums up the whole duty of Man.

As the imperfection of the soul is due to nothing except the contaminating influence of the body, it follows that she again becomes perfect when this tie is dissolved. By purifying herself from lusts, passions, and worldly imaginations, from whatever is alien to the divine element, she wins back the Paradise that she had lost awhile. Yet even the sensible may serve as a bridge to the spiritual, and love of earthly beauty kindle a holier flame², for what is love but a yearning to the Good and Fair?³ The soul travels homeward by a series of ascending stages, which correspond to those of descent⁴. In the last stage she rises beyond reason and knowledge to a state of unconscious rapture

§ 8. Before considering the general character of Jalāl's lyric poetry, what traces can we discover, either in his writings or in the biographies and traditions concerning him, of any external influences that may have helped to form his style?

(1) When Jalāl was passing through Nishāpūr on the way from Balkh, he met Farīdu 'ddīn 'Aṭṭār, who gave him the *Asrār-nāma*³.

(2) He was well acquainted with the poems of Sanā'ī⁴, to whom he pays a tribute in one of his odes (xxii. in this selection).

(3) His meeting with Sa'dī is mentioned by Aflākī (Redhouse, Maṣnavī, p. 29) and Rizā Kulī (T. 4. 13^a).

(4) Nizāmī is referred to (x. 10., in this selection).

(5) We find what seem to be echoes of 'Omar Khayyām⁵.

⁴ Jalāl is reported to have said, 'The Word of God (Kor'ān) is but milk of which the Ilāhī-nāma is the cream and the butter' (Aflākī in Redhouse's Maṣnavī, p. 65). The Ilāhī-nāma is another name for the Ḥadiqa. Cf. Maṣnavī (Teherān Ed. 1307 A.H.), p. 391, l. 27, with gloss ad loc. Jāmī mentions the Ilāhī-nāma and Mantiqu 'ttair together (Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 540, last line).

We shall be safe in asserting that none of the last three made a deep impression on his mind. Sa'dī with his practical morality, his heart-felt piety, and half-hearted mysticism, could never have appealed to a sensitive God-intoxicated nature like Jalāl's. The distinction comes out plainly enough in their writings. 'The ghazals of Sa'dī,' says the Tabriz editor (T. 3. 11^a), 'are extremely elegant and exceedingly beautiful, but the thoughts will prove to be mostly profane (مجاز)¹ and the diction full of amatory conceits (نازو نیاز): no revelation of the Truth or explanation of the mystic Path will be found there: the discerning critic and intelligent reader knows that in the utterances of Janābi Maulavī Ma'navī 'tis another story.'

Nor can he have been attracted by the extant compositions of Nizāmī except, possibly, the Makhzanu 'l Asrār, while 'Omar Khayyām's negation and instability were even less calculated to lay hold of him.

With 'Aṭṭār and Sanā'ī, on the contrary, he was in full accord. We may conjecture that the first impulse in his mind towards Ṣūfism arose from the perusal of their celebrated poems, the Mantiqu 'ṭṭair and the Ḥudīqa. They were always his leaders, the soul and eyes of 'Taṣawwuf:

عطار روح بود و سنائی دو چشمِ او

ما از پی سنائی و عطار آمدیم

We have seen that Ṣūfiistic theosophy is the fountain-head of Jalāl's inspiration. From this the Masnavi and Divān descend by separate channels. The one is a majestic river, calm and deep, meandering through many a rich and varied landscape to the immeasurable ocean; the other a foaming torrent that leaps and plunges in the ethereal solitude of the hills. It may be doubted whether the vast reputation of the Masnavi has not injured the poet's fame. He has even been denied a place in 'the notable succession of Oriental singers about whom the world is willing to hear².' And perhaps this estimate is not altogether surprising. Had Wordsworth never written anything besides the Excursion, he would still be read by Wordsworthians and neglected by his countrymen. The Masnavi contains a wealth of delightful poetry. But its readers must pick their way through apologues, dialogues, interpretations of Kôr'anic texts, metaphysical subtleties and moral exhortations, ere all at once they chance upon a passage of pure and exquisite song.

Now in the Divān we have the poet with his singing-robes about him. Thus equipped he can hardly fail to be recognised.

That his odes should exhibit a certain monotony of ideas is inevitable. To the mystic all apparent difference is the evidence and manifestation of an underlying unity, or rather it is unity :

What was that mass of waters? Nought but the wave.

What was that wave? Nought but the Sea¹.

For him the world is non-existent, and he will not study the unreal; like the compass he circles ever round a point, on which his thoughts, actions, and very being depend: he cannot stray from his course any more than a star can leave its orbit. Hence all mystical writings are the record of one spiritual experience and are pervaded by a single overpowering emotion. The language of all mystics is the same. How often do Law, Emerson, and Shelley remind us of the Maṣnavī! Juan de la Cruz has indited lyrics which it would be easy to mistake for translations from the Dīvān.

To continue our criticism, the marks of haste and occasional roughnesses, that cannot escape any one accustomed to the elaborate technique of Hāfiz and Jāmī, are doubtless due to the circumstances in which the Dīvān was composed. 'For the most part,' says Riza Kuli (T. 3. 1), 'they are poems inspired in divers states of reason and love and ecstasy and intoxication and effacement and mystic dance.' Consequently they will not be to all classes dear nor acceptable to every ear, as a famous one hath said, "We are known by those of our own kind, but other men deny us." According to Daulat Shāh, 'There was a pillar in the Maulavī's house, and when he was drowned in the ocean of love he used to take hold of that pillar and set himself turning round it. Meanwhile he versified and dictated and people wrote down the verses.'

Again, we have certain words and phrases run to death, as the saying goes. To some extent this fault is common to all Persian poetry. They did not cultivate 'the art to blot' at Shīrāz and Bokhārā, whose laureate, Rūdagi, is credited with nearly three million lines. Naturally an improvisateur, pouring forth his thoughts as fast as they come to his lips and wrought by sphere-music to a pitch of transport where all conscious sense of polish and style has long ago been annihilated—naturally such a one will offend in this point more conspicuously than self-contained and soberer spirits.

The beauty and purity of his diction need not be illustrated at length. I will quote one passage in his noblest manner :

این خواجه را در کوی ما در گل فرو رفته است پا
 با تو بگویم حال او بر خوان إذا جاء القضا

جباروار و زفت او دامن کشان میرفت او
 تسخر گُنان بر عاشقان بازیچه دید عشقرا
 ای خواجه سرمستك شدی بر عاشقان خُنْبك زدی
 مستِ خُداوندِ خُودی کُشتی کُرفتِی با خُدا
 بس مُرغ پَران در هوا از 'دامها فرد و جدا
 میآید از چرخ قضا بر سینه اش تیرِ بلا
 (T. 15. 1).

Hard by a master dwells, his feet in mire
 Deep-sunken ; of his state I prophesy.
 Recite the boding verse, "When doom shall fall."

'Tyrannous he and mighty, and oft he swept Along in proud magnificence to mock
 At lovers, love he deemed an idle play.

Lo, a besotted fool like thee to scorn
 The votaries of love ! God's wine has drowned
 Thy wits and bidden thee wrestle with thy Lord.

As when a bird his airy flight resumes
 Exultingly, nor dreads the distant lure :
 Fate to his bosom speeds the shaft of woe.

The style throughout is simple and unaffected. Passages like the following, which recalls the decadent euphuism of the Anvārī Suhailī et hoc genus omne, are comparatively rare :

To this holy parrot in the cage of existence

Thankfully give sugar to peck, ere it soars aloft.

Plunder, like a Turk, the wretched Hindoo, Life.

A glance at these impassioned hymns will inform the reader that the weapon of allegory is seldom out of the poet's hand. But Jalālu 'ddīn does not balance literal and spiritual meanings so equally as to leave the choice uncertain. His words will always bear the profoundest interpretation. He is no juggler with mysteries. Although his metaphors are drawn from every field of Nature and Art, neither Art nor Nature is the subject which they adorn.

 (T. 143. 10^a).

God is the Sākī and the Wine:
 He knows what manner of Love is mine.

While these figures are sometimes to our taste grotesque and inappropriate in a 'Buch der Lieder,' they more often display a daring and felicitous originality.

Jalālu 'ddīn is especially partial to metaphors of light and sound. 'The conception of God as a radiant Sun', whose shadow is the world, recurs continually with reference to Shamsi Tabrīz. Love is a fierce-sparkling fire (آتشِ عظیم‌شرار), the lover that seeks her mate and ceases not to moan¹. The poet likens it also to a lute thrilling at the lightest touch of the musician², or to a voice that echoes on the hillside³. To Nature he never appeals in vain⁴. The stork's cry bids him think on God, 'to whom is the kingdom and the glory⁵'; in autumn the pale vine-leaves mourn the loss of his Beloved⁶.

To conclude this somewhat desultory review, let me state briefly the merits and defects of the Dīvān.

⁴ Nature's sympathy with the mystic is finely expressed by Sa'di (Būstān, p. 221, l. 289 seqq.).

عارفِ مُرغانُست لکَلک لکَلکش دانی که چه
مُلک لک وَاَلْأَمْرُ لَک وَاَلْحَمْدُ لَک یَا مُسْتَعَانُ

رفتم هَنکامِ خزانِ سویی رزان دستِ گُزان

(T. 127. 8).

Jalālu 'ddīn lacks the colour and perfume of Hāfiz, who is by turns grave and gay, blasphemous and devout, serious and ironic; his music is rich and full, but for the most part he plays on one string; he has no sense of humour; his allegory is often grotesque and his execution careless.

In sublimity of thought and grandeur of expression he challenges the greatest masters of song; time after time he strikes a lofty note without effort; the clearness of his vision gives a wonderful exaltation to his verse, which beats against the sky; his odes throb with passion and rapture-enkindling power¹; his diction is choice and unartificial; at intervals we meet with some splendidly imaginative figure,

‘A bracelet of bright hair about the bone.’

As a mystic, he was too much in earnest to care for, even if he observed, the incongruities which draw upon him the censure of fastidious critics. As a poet, he sought to invest the Ṣūfī doctrine with every charm that his genius could inspire. The traces of this conflict are not wholly obliterated. Apparet adhuc vetus inde cicatrix. But in higher moments the opposing characters are swept away and overwhelmed in a flood of celestial harmony, for of Jalālu 'ddīn as of Shelley it may be truly said: ‘This is not poetry borrowing the forms of pantheistic speculation, but pantheism assuming to itself the faith and passion which transmutes speculative thought into religion².’

§ 9. There are three editions of the Dīvān.

(1) Tabriz Ed. (T), published in 1280 A.H., 378 pp., divided as follows: Preface, 2—5; first Dīvān, entitled دیوان شمس الحقایق من مصنفات جناب مولوی معنوی, 6—110; second Dīvān, with the heading هذا کتاب الغزلیات مولانا قدس سره, 112—361; rubā'is, 361—376; note by the editor, 376—378.

This edition does not pretend to completeness¹. It contains about 9000 beyts, exclusive of rubā'is, and the text is remarkably good. The editor, Rīzā Kulī Khān, with the nom de plume Hidāyat, is an authority on Persian history and literature. He wrote a supplement to Mīr-khwānd's Rauzatū 'ṣṣafā, bringing it down to his own time (see Browne, Episode of the Bāb, Vol. II. p. 188).

(2) Lakhnau Ed. (Lakh.), published in 1295 A.H., 378 pp., containing over 12,000 beyts. Like most Persian texts printed in India, it is disfigured by numerous errors, while the readings are often inferior. Its value depends on the large quantity of new matter which it embodies.

(3) Rosenzweig's Auswahl (R)², published at Vienna

in 1838, 236 pp. The selected poems are 75 in number. The author commands a flow of easy and musical verse : it is his highest praise that we are occasionally reminded of Rückert. On the other hand his scholarship is far from exact and his knowledge of Persian prosody quite inadequate. E.g. on p. 88 (beyts 6—7) we read :

انرا که دستِ او ببوسید
 بوقتِ مرگ شیر شد دهانش
 ز رویش شکر گویم باز خویش
 که کفو او نمیبیند جهانش

which is thus rendered :

Glückselig Jene die die Hand ihm küssen !
 Ihr Mund träuft Milch, ruft einst der 'Tod sie ab.
 Ich spreche zuckersüß von seinen Wangen,
 Ihm Gleiches wird die Welt wohl nimmer seh'n.

In the second line the metre requires شیرین for شیر, and in the third شکر, not شکر, as Rosenzweig has translated it. باز خویش is nonsense. What Jalālu 'ddīn wrote was :

ز رویش شکر گویم یا ز خویش

Shall I give thanks for his countenance or for his nature ?

Blunders of this kind are too frequent. The 'elucidating remarks' do not invite serious criticism : they fill five pages and seem designed to spare the reader the trouble of using his dictionary. Apart from the literary merit of the translation, we cannot speak favourably of the work as a whole, though perhaps it fairly represents the level reached by oriental learning in Europe sixty years ago.

The renderings by Von Hammer in his Schöne Redekünste Persiens (pp. 173—195) are superior to Rosenzweig's in point of accuracy, but 'they are so deficient in poetical feeling and beauty of form, that the reader is repelled rather than attracted¹.' Of the seventy pieces which he has translated only four occur in the present anthology².

I have consulted the following manuscripts :

(L) A MS. in the Leyden University Library, dated 851 A.H. and described in the Catalogue of Oriental Manuscripts, Vol. II. p. 110. It contains the Maṣnavī as well as the Dīvān.

(V) A MS. in the Hofbibliothek at Vienna, dated 4th Muḥarram, 845 A.H., and described in Flügel's Handschriften der Wiener Hofbibliothek, Vol. I. p. 522.

(B) A MS. in the British Museum (Or. 2866), dated 1st Jumādā 'l Ākhir, 774 A.H., and described in Rieu's Supplement to the Persian Catalogue, p. 163.

(B²) A MS. in the British Museum (Add. 16,779), apparently of the 16th century. It is described in Rieu's Persian Catalogue, p. 825.

(B³) A MS. in the British Museum (Or. 289), dated Dhū'l Qa'da, 824 A.H., and described in Rieu's Persian Catalogue, p. 593. This MS. contains ghazals from ج to ع only.

(C) A MS. in the possession of Professor E. B. Cowell, 523 pp., written partly in good Nasta'liq and partly in a very illegible modern hand.

(C²) A MS. belonging to Prof. Cowell, written in clear Nasta'liq, apparently in the 17th century. It consists of about 330 pp. The ghazals from ج to ه are wanting.

There is no textus receptus of the Dīvān. The MSS. differ not only in the number and order of the beyts in each ghazal, but in the number and order of the ghazals themselves. Three of the finest poems in this selection (xii. xvii. and xxxi.) occur in a single manuscript. We can hardly doubt that several spurious pieces are included. According to Riṣā Kulī (T. 4. 24^a seq.) the Dīvān consists of about 50,000 beyts. Sprenger mentions a copy in the Moty Maḥall at Lucknow, which contains ghazals, 1200 pp. of 34 beyts, tarjī'-bands, 46 pp., and about 4000 rubā'is (nearly 60,000 beyts in all)¹.

Though I have collated the text of the selected poems in the various MSS., I have not exhibited the complete results of this collation, as it seemed undesirable to increase largely the bulk of a book already swollen beyond its original design. Moreover, little was to be gained by presenting to the reader a confused mass of discrepancies without any possibility of determining what the poet actually wrote. In preparing the text of each ghazal I have followed one MS., which is signified by the capital letter placed opposite the first line. All important deviations from this MS. are noted below, and a few trivial errors have been tacitly corrected. At the foot of each ghazal I give a list of the MSS. and editions in which it is found. Unfortunately, the references to L and V are somewhat defective, as a number of poems have been added to the text since I last had an opportunity of examining these valuable manuscripts. I have not, as a rule, resorted to B² except in difficult passages. Prof. Cowell's second MS. (C²) did not come into my hands until the greater portion of the book was in type.

A word as to the orthography. In the first place, there are some inconsistencies of spelling mainly due to the plan, which I have adopted, of compiling a text from separate MSS. These are unimportant. Now and then I have abandoned the MSS. spelling for metrical reasons: e.g. my text gives آئینه (— — —), آینه (— — —), معنای (— — —)¹, معنی (— — —), while the MSS. have آینه and معنی indifferently. As regards the vowel-points, which are very seldom marked in the MSS., my intention was to insert kasra and damma throughout, but fatha only in doubtful cases. This method, though not indefensible, is perhaps too liberal in a work addressed to those who have mastered more than the rudiments of Persian, and I do not regret that my practice has fallen short of the principle. Were I commencing anew, I should mark the izāfat and omit everything else. The pointing, خود (khvad) and خوش (khvash), is authorised by Salemann and Shukovski in their Persische Grammatik. A few words have been wrongly pointed, e.g. کافر, which ought to be written کافر, as is shown by its occurrence in rhyme. Most of these, I think, will be found in the list of Addenda and Corrigenda.

¹ I have represented MSS. معنی (— — —) by معنی, but معنای is in accordance with usage, and should be preferred.

If thou art Love's lover and seekest Love,
 Take a keen poniard and cut the throat of bashfulness.
 Know that reputation is a great hindrance in the path;
 This saying is disinterested: receive it with pure mind.
 Wherefore did that madman work madness in a thousand forms,
 That chosen wild one display a thousand wiles?
 Now he rent robe, and now sped o'er mountain,
 Now sipped poison, and now chose death.
 Since the spider seized prey so large,
 Behold what the snare of My Lord the Supreme will do!
 Since the love of Laila's face had such value,
 How will it be with "He took His servant by night"?

Hast thou not seen the dīvāns of Waisa and Rāmīn ?

Hast thou not read the tales of Wāmiq and 'Adrā ?

Thou gatherest up thy garment lest the water should wet it :

Needs must thou plunge a thousand times in the sea.

Love's way is all lowliness and drunkenness :

For the torrent runs down : how should it run upward ?

Thou wilt be as the bezel in the ring of lovers

If thou art the bezel's thrall, O master.

Even as this earth to the sky is thrall,

Even as the body to the spirit is thrall.

Come, say, what did the earth lose by this connexion ?

What kindnesses has not the reason done to the limbs ?

It behoves not, son, to beat a drum under a quilt ;

Plant, like brave men, thy banner in the midst of the desert.

Hark with the soul's ear to the sounds innumerable

In the hollow of the green dome, rising from lovers' passionate cry.

When the strings of thy robe are loosed by the intoxication of love,

Behold heaven's triumph and Orion's bewilderment!

How the world, high and low, is troubled

By love, which is purified from high and low!

When the sun goes up, where stayeth night?

When the joy of bounty came, where lagged affliction?

I am silent. Speak thou, O soul of soul of soul,

From desire of whose face every atom grew articulate.

Our desert hath no bound,

Our hearts and souls have no rest.

World in world has ta'en Form's image ;

Which of these images is ours ?

When thou seest in the pathway a severed head,

Which is rolling toward our field,

Ask of it, ask of it, the secrets of the heart :

For of it thou wilt learn our hidden mystery.

How would it be, if an ear showed itself,

Familiar with the tongues of our songsters ?

How would it be, if a bird took wing,

Bearing the collar of the secret of our Solomon ?

What shall I say, what think ? for this tale

Is too high for our limited and contingent being.

How keep silence, when every moment

Our anguish grows more anguished?

Partridge and falcon alike are flying together

Mid the air of our mountain-land;

Mid an air which is the seventh atmosphere,

At the zenith whereof is our Saturn.

Are not the seven heavens below the empyrean?

Beyond the empyrean is our revolution.

What place here for aspirations toward the empyrean and the sky?

Our journey is to the rose-garden of union.

Leave this tale. Ask not of us,

For our tale is wholly interrupted.

 ‘Present,’ I said, ‘my service to that moon-like form.’
 I bowed, I said : ‘Bear that service to the sun
 Who maketh hard rocks gold by his burning.’
 I bared my breast, I showed it the wounds :
 ‘Give news of me,’ I said, ‘to the Beloved whose drink

David said : ‘ O Lord, since thou hast no need of us, Say, then, what wisdom was there in creating the two worlds ? ’

God said to him : ‘ O temporal man, I was a hidden treasure ;

I sought that that treasure of lovingkindness and bounty should be revealed.

I displayed a mirror—its face the heart, its back the world—

Its back is better than its face—if the face is unknown to thee.’

When straw is mixed with clay, how should the mirror be successful ?

When you part the straw from the clay, the mirror becomes clear.

Grape-juice does not turn to wine, unless it ferment awhile in the jar ;

Would you have your heart grow bright, you must take a little trouble.

The soul which issued forth from the body—my king saith to it :

‘ Thou art come even as thou wentest : where are the traces of my benefactions ? ’

’Tis notorious that copper by alchemy becomes gold :

Our copper has been transmuted by this rare alchemy.

O thou who art my soul's comfort in the season of sorrow,

O thou who art my spirit's treasure in the bitterness of dearth!

That which the imagination has not conceived, that which the understanding has not seen,

Visiteth my soul from thee; hence in worship I turn toward thee.

By thy grace I keep fixed on eternity my amorous gaze,
Except, O king, the pomps that perish lead me astray.

The favour of that one, who brings glad tidings of thee, Even without thy summons, is sweeter in mine ear than songs.

In the prostrations of prayer thought of thee, O lord,
Is necessary and binding on me as the seven verses.

To thee belongs mercy and intercession for the sin of infidels:

As regards me, thou art chief and principal of the stony-hearted.

If a never-ceasing bounty should offer kingdoms,

If a hidden treasure should set before me all that is,

Eternal life, methinks, is the time of union,

Because time, for me, hath no place there.

Life is the vessels, union the clear draught in them;

Without thee what does the pain of the vessels avail me?

I had twenty thousand desires ere this;

In passion for him not even (care of) my safety remained.

By the help of his grace I am become safe, because

The unseen king saith to me, 'Thou art the soul of the world.'

The essence of the meaning of "He" has filled my heart and soul;

"Au" cries the street-dog, and neither have I third or second.

The body, at the time of union with him, paid no regard to the spirit;

Tho' incorporeal, he became visible unto me.

I aged with his affliction, but when Tabrīz

You name, all my youth comes back to me.

That moon, which the sky ne'er saw even in dreams, has returned

And brought a fire no water can quench,

See the body's house, and see my soul,

This made drunken and that desolate by the cup of his love.

When the host of the tavern became my heart-mate,

My blood turned to wine and my heart to kabāb.

When the eye is filled with thought of him, a voice
arrives :

‘Well done, O flagon, and bravo, wine!’

Love's fingers tear up, root and stem,

Every house where sunbeams fall from love.

When my heart saw love's sea, of a sudden

It left me and leaped in, crying, ‘Find me.’

The face of Shamsi Dīn, Tabrīz's glory, is the sun

In whose track the cloud-like hearts are moving.

We are bound for heaven: who has a mind to sight-seeing?
 We have been in heaven, we have been friends of the

Tho' we came down, let us haste back—what place is this?

Young fortune is our friend, yielding up soul our business;

The leader of our caravan is Muṣṭafā, glory of the world.

This thought's radiance is from a cheek like "*by the

By his cheek the moon was split: she endured not the sight of him;

Such fortune the moon found—she that is an humble beggar.

Behold a continual “cleaving of the moon” in our hearts,
For why should the vision of that vision transcend thine eye?

Came the billow of “Am I not?” and wrecked the body’s ship;

When the ship wrecks once more is the time of union’s attainment.

Mankind, like waterfowl, are sprung from the sea—the sea of soul;

Risen from that sea, why should the bird make here his home?

Nay, we are pearls in that sea, therein we all abide;

Else, why does wave follow wave from the sea of soul?

’Tis the time of union’s attainment, ’tis the time of eternity’s beauty,

’Tis the time of favour and largesse, ’tis the ocean of perfect purity.

The billow of largesse hath appeared, the thunder of the sea hath arrived,

The morn of blessedness hath dawned. Morn? No, ’tis the light of God.

Who is this pictured form, who is this monarch and this prince ?

Who is this aged wisdom ? They are all veils.

The remedy against veils is ecstasies like these,

The fountain of these draughts is in your own head and eyes.

In the head itself is nought, but ye have two heads ;

This head of clay is from earth, and that pure head from heaven.

O the many pure heads scattered beneath the clay,

That thou mayst know the head depends on that other head !

That original head hidden, and this derived head manifest,
Forasmuch as behind this world lies the infinite universe.

Tie up the skin, O cup-bearer, fetch wine from our jar :

The vessel of perceptions is straiter than a strait pass.

From Tabrīz-ward shone the Sun of Truth, and I said
to him :

‘Thy light is at once joined with all things and apart from all.’

Is the heart ne'er burned in the fire of thy affliction.

•To thy praise and praisers there is no end ;

What atom but is reeling with thy praise ?

Like that one of whom Nizāmī tells in verse,

Tyrannise not, for I cannot endure thy tyranny.

O Shamsi Tabriz, beauty and glory of the horizons,

What king but is a beggar of thee with heart and soul ?

O Beloved, spiritual beauty is very fair and glorious,
 But thine own beauty and loveliness is another thing.
 O thou who art years describing spirit,
 Show one quality that is equal to his essence.
 Light waxes in the eye at the imagination of him,
 But in presence of his union it is dimmed.
 I stand open-mouthed in veneration of that beauty :
 'God is most great' is on my heart's lips every moment.
 The heart hath gotten an eye constant in desire of thee.
 Oh, how that desire feeds heart and eye !
 'Tis slave-caressing thy love has practised ;
 Else, where is the heart worthy of that love ?
 Every heart that has slept one night in thy air
 Is like radiant day : thereby the air is illumined.

Every one that is without object is as thy disciple :
 His object is gained without the semblance of object.
 Each reprobate who has burned in this love and fallen in it,
 Fell into Kauṣar : for thy love is Kauṣar.
 From hope of union my foot comes not to earth :
 While I am severed from thee, my hand is on my head.
 Be not sorrowful, O heart, at this oppression of enemies,
 And think on this, that the Sweetheart is judge.
 If the foe is rejoiced at my sallow face,
 This sallow face of mine is from the red rose.
 Since the beauty of my Beloved is beyond description,
 How fat is my grief and how lean my praise !

• Every form you see has its archetype in the placeless world;
If the form perished, no matter, since its original is everlasting.

Every fair shape you have seen, every deep saying you have heard,

Be not cast down that it perished; for that is not so.

Whereas the spring-head is undying, its branch gives water continually;

Since neither can cease, why are you lamenting?

Conceive the Soul as a fountain, and these created things
as rivers:

• While the fountain flows, the rivers run from it.

Put grief out of your head and keep quaffing this river-water;

Do not think of the water failing; for this water is without end.

From the moment you came into the world of being,

A ladder was placed before you that you might escape.

First you were mineral, later you turned to plant,

Then you became animal: how should this be a secret to you? •

'Twere better that the spirit which wears not true love
as a garment

Had not been : its being is but shame.

Be drunken in love, for love is all that exists;

Without the dealing of love there is no entrance to the Beloved.

They say, 'What is love?' Say, 'Renunciation of will.'

Whoso has not escaped from will, no will hath he.

The lover is a monarch : two worlds lie at his feet ;

The king pays no heed to what lies at his feet.

'Tis love and the lover that live to all eternity ;

Set not thy heart on aught else : 'tis only borrowed.

How long wilt thou embrace a dead beloved ?

Embrace the soul which is embraced by nothing.

What was born of spring dies in autumn,

Love's rose-plot hath no aiding from the early spring.

A thorn is the companion of the rose that comes of spring,

And the wine that comes of grape-juice is not free from headache.

Be not an expectant looker-on in this path ;

By God, there is no death worse than expectancy.

Set thy heart on sterling coin, if thou be not false ;
 Give ear to this deep saying, if thou lack an earring.
 Do not tremble on the steed of the body, but fare
 • lighter on foot ;
 God lends him wings who is not mounted on the body.
 Dismiss • cares and be utterly clear of heart,
 Like the face of a mirror without image and picture.
 When it becomes clear of images, all images are contained in it ;
 No man's • face is ashamed of that clear-faced one.
 Wouldst thou have a clear mirror, behold thyself therein,
 For it is not ashamed or afraid of telling the truth.
 Since the steel face gained this purity by discrimination,
 What needs the heart's face, which has no dust ?
 But betwixt the steel and the heart is this difference,
 That the one is a keeper of secrets, while the other is not.

This house wherein is continually the sound of the viol,
Ask of the master what house is this.

What means this idol-form, if this is the house of the Ka'ba?
And what means this light of God, if this is a Magian temple?

In this house is a treasure which the universe is too small to hold;

This house and this master is all acting and pretence.
Lay no hand on the house, for this house is a talisman;
Speak not with the master, for he is drunken overnight.
The dust and rubbish of this house is all musk and perfume;

The roof and door of this house is all verse and melody.
In fine, whoever has found the way into this house
Is sultan of the world and Solomon of the time.

O master, bend down thy head once from this roof,
For in thy fair face is a token of fortune.

I swear by thy soul that save the sight of thy countenance,
All, tho' 'twere the kingdom of the earth, is fantasy and fable.

The garden is bewildered to know which is the leaf, and which the blossom ;

The birds are distracted to know which is the snare and which the bait.

This is the Lord of heaven, who resembles Venus and
the moon,

This is the house of Love, which has no bound or end.
Like a mirror, the soul has received thy image in its heart ;
The tip of thy curl has sunk into the heart like a comb.
Forasmuch as the women cut their hands in Joseph's presence,

Come to me, O soul, for the Beloved is in the midst.
All the house are drunken—none has knowledge
Of each who enters that he is so-and-so or so-and-so.
Do not sit intoxicated at the door : come into the house quickly ;

He is in the dark whose place is the threshold.

Those drunk with God, tho' they be thousands, are yet one ;
Those drunk with lust—tho' it be a single one, he is a double.

Go into the wood of lions and reck not of the wound,
For thought and fear—all these are figments of women.

'They said, 'He is not to be found, we have sought Him long.'

A thing which is not to be found—that is my desire.

I am more eloquent than the nightingale, but because of vulgar envy

A seal is on my tongue, tho' I desire to moan.

Yesterday the Master with a lantern was roaming about
the city,

Crying, 'I am tired of devil and beast, I desire a man.'

My state has passed even beyond all yearning and desire ; .

I desire to go from Being and Place toward the Essentials.

He is hidden from our eyes, and all objects are from Him ;

I desire that hidden One whose works are manifest.

Mine ear listened to the tale of faith and was intoxicated ;

Say, 'The limbs and the body and the form of faith are my desire.'

I myself am Love's rebeck, and Love is a rebeck to me ;

I desire the hand and bosom and modulation of 'Othmān.

That rebeck is saying, 'Every moment passionately

I desire the favours of the mercy of the Merciful.'

O cunning minstrel, con the rest of this ode

After this fashion, for after this fashion I desire.

Love ;

I am the hoopoe: the presence of Solomon is my desire.

I was on that day when the Names were not,
 Nor any sign of existence endowed with name.
 By me Names and Named were brought to view
 On the day when there were not 'I' and 'We.'
 For a sign, the tip of the Beloved's curl became a centre of revelation ;
 As yet the tip of that fair curl was not.
 Cross and Christians, from end to end,
 I surveyed ; He was not on the Cross.
 I went to the idol-temple, to the ancient pagoda ;
 No trace was visible there.
 I went to the mountains of Herāt and Candahār ;
 I looked ; He was not in that hill-and-dale.

With set purpose I fared to the summit of Mount Qāf ;

In that place was only the 'Anqā's habitation.

I bent the reins of search to the Ka'ba ;

He was not in that resort of old and young.

I questioned Ibn Sīnā of his state ;

He was not in Ibn Sīnā's range.

I fared towards the scene of "two bow-lengths' distance";

He was not in that exalted court.

I gazed into my own heart ;

There I saw Him ; He was nowhere else.

Save pure-souled Shamsi Tabrīz

None ever was drunken and intoxicated and distraught.

XVIII.

Before thee the soul is hourly decaying and growing,
 And for one soul's sake how should any plead with thee?
 Wherever thou settest foot a head springs up from the earth ;

For one head's sake why should any wash his hands of thee ?

That day when the soul takes flight enraptured by thy fragrance,

The soul knows, the soul knows what fragrance is the Beloved's.

As soon as thy fumes vanish out of the brain,
 The head heaves a hundred sighs, every hair is lamenting.
 I have emptied house, to be quit of the furniture ;
 I am waning, that thy love may increase and wax.
 'Tis best to gamble the soul away for so great a gain.
 Peace ! for it is worth, O master, just that which it seeks.
 My soul in pursuit of thy love, Shamsu 'l Haqq of Tabriz,
 Is scudding without feet, ship-like, over the sea.

At morning-tide a moon appeared in the sky,
 And descended from the sky and gazed on me.
 Like a falcon which snatches a bird at the time of hunting,
 That moon snatched me up and coursed over the sky.
 When I looked at myself, I saw myself no more,
 Because in that moon my body became by grace, even as soul.
 When I travelled in soul, I saw nought save the moon,
 Till the secret of the eternal Theophany was all revealed.
 The nine spheres of heaven were all merged in that moon,
 The vessel of my being was completely hidden in the sea.
 The sea broke into waves, and again Wisdom rose
 And cast abroad a voice ; so it happened and thus it befell.
 Foamed the sea, and at every foam-fleck
 Something took figure and something was bodied forth.

Without the power imperial of Shamsu 'l Ḥaqq of Tabrīz

A beauty that all night long teaches love-tricks to Venus and the moon,

Whose two eyes by their witchery seal up the two eyes of heaven.

Look to your hearts! I, whate'er betide, O Moslems,
Am so mingled with him that no heart is mingled with me.
I was born of his love at the first, I gave him my heart
at the last;

When the fruit springs from the bough, on that bough
it hangs.

The tip of his curl is saying, 'Ho! betake thee to rope-dancing.'

The cheek of his candle is saying, 'Where is a moth that it may burn?'

For the sake of dancing on that rope, O heart, make haste, become a hoop;

Cast thyself on the flame, when his candle is lit.

Thou wilt never more endure without the flame, when thou hast known the rapture of burning;

If the water of life should come to thee, it would not stir thee from the flame.

Quoth some one, 'Master Sanā'ī is dead.'

The death of such a master is no little thing.

He was not chaff which flew on the wind,

He was not water which froze in winter.

He was not a comb which was broken with an hair,

He was not a seed which the earth crushed.

He was a treasure of gold in this dust-pit,

For he valued the two worlds at a barley-corn.

The earthly frame he flung to the earth,

Soul and intellect he bore to heaven.

The pure elixir mingled with the wine-dregs

Came to the jar's surface, and the lees settled apart.

The second soul which the vulgar know not

I protest by God that he surrendered to the Beloved.

When my bier moveth on the day of death,
 Think not my heart is in this world.
 Do not weep for me and cry 'Woe, woe!'
 Thou wilt fall in the devil's snare: that is woe.
 When thou seest my hearse, cry not 'Parted, parted!'
 Union and meeting are mine in that hour.
 If thou commit me to the grave, say not 'Farewell,

The earth of the grave-yard is confounded by their cries,
By the din of the drums of resurrection, by the pomp of rising from the dead.

They have rent their shrouds, they have pressed tight their two ears in terror ;

What is brain and ear before the blast of the trumpet ?

Look to thine eye, that thou mistake not,

That unto thee the essence of seer and seen may be one.

To whatever side thou gaze, my form thou shalt espy,

Whether thou gaze on self or towards that moil and mell.

Shun distorted vision and heal thine eyes,

For in that moment the evil eye shall be far from my

From the bosom of Self I catch continually a scent of the Beloved :

How should I not, every night, take Self to my bosom ?
Yestereve I was in Love's garden : this desire came into my head :

His sun peeped forth from mine eye : the river (of tears)
began to flow.

Each laughing rose that springs from his laughing lip
Had escaped the thorn of being, had avoided Dhū 'lfiqār.
Every tree and blade of grass was dancing in the meadow,
But in the view of the vulgar they were bound and at rest.

Suddenly on one side our Cypress appeared,
So that the garden became senseless and the plane clapped its hands.

A face like fire, wine like fire, Love afire—all three delectable ;

The soul, by reason of the mingled fires, was wailing
'Where shall I flee ?'

In the world of Divine Unity is no room for Number,
But Number necessarily exists in the world of Five and Four.

If a tree might move by foot and wing,

And if the sun did not fare by wing and foot every night,
 How would the world be illuminated at morning-tide?

Whence would the garden be quickened by river and rain?
 When the drop departed from its native home and returned,
 It found a shell and became a pearl.

I cried out, at midnight, 'Who is in this house of the heart?'

He said, "'Tis I, by whose countenance moon and sun are shamed.'

He said, 'Why is this house of the heart filled with diverse images?'

Said I, 'They are the reflexion of thee, O thou whose face is a candle of Chigil.'

He said, 'What is this other image, bedabbled with heart's blood?'

Said I, 'This is the image of me, heart-sore and with feet in the mire.'

I bound the neck of my soul and brought it to him as a token:

'It is the confidant of Love; do not sacrifice thine own confidant.'

He gave me the end of a thread—a thread full of mischief and guile—

'Pull,' he said, 'that I may pull, and break it not in the pulling.'

XXIX.

Why does not the soul take wing, when from the glorious
Presence

A speech of sweet favour comes to it, saying, 'Aloft'?
How should a fish not leap nimbly from the dry land into the water,

When the sound of waves reaches its ear from the cold ocean?

Why should a falcon not fly from the quarry towards the King,

When it hears by drum and drum-stick the notice of "Return"?

Why should not every Sūfī begin to dance, like a mote,
In the sun of eternity, that it may deliver him from decay?

Such grace and beauty and loveliness and bestowal of life!
O misery and error, if any one dispense with Him!
Fly, fly, O bird, to thy native home,
For thou hast escaped from the cage, and thy pinions are outspread.

Travel away from the bitter stream towards the water
of life,

Return from the vestibule to the high seat of the soul.

Haste, haste! for we too, O soul, are coming
 From this world of severance to that world of union.
 O how long shall we, like children, in the earthly sphere
 Fill our lap with dust and stones and sherds?
 Let us give up the earth and fly heavenwards,
 Let us flee from childhood to the banquet of men.
 Behold how the earthly frame has entrapped thee!
 Rend the sack and raise thy head clear.
 Take from Love this scroll with thy right hand;
 Thou art no child, not to know thy right from thy left.
 God said to Reason's messenger, 'Begone,'
 To the hand of Death he said, 'Chastise worldly desire.'
 A voice came to the spirit, 'Spirit thee away to the Unseen,
 Take the gain and the treasure and lament the pain no more.'
 Cry out and proclaim that thou art King;
 Thine is the grace of answer, and thine is the knowledge of question. •

I have put duality away, I have seen that the two worlds are one ;

One I seek, One I know, One I see, One I call.

He is the first, He is the last, He is the outward, He is the inward ;

I know none other except 'Yā Hū' and 'Yā man Hū.'

I am intoxicated with Love's cup, the two worlds have passed out of my ken ;

I have no business save carouse and revelry.

If once in my life I spent a moment without thee,

From that time and from that hour I repent of my life.

If once in this world I win a moment with thee,

I will trample on both worlds, I will dance in triumph for ever.

O Shamsi Tabrīz, I am so drunken in this world,

That except of drunkenness and revelry I have no tale to tell.

I am a painter, a maker of pictures ; every moment I shape a beauteous form,
And then in thy presence I melt them all away.
I call up a hundred phantoms and indue them with a spirit ;
When I behold thy phantom, I cast them in the fire.
Art thou the Vintner's cup-bearer or the enemy of him who is sober,
Or is it thou who mak'st a ruin of every house I build?
In thee the soul is dissolved, with thee it is mingled ;
Lo ! I will cherish the soul, because it has a perfume of thee.
Every drop of blood which proceeds from me is saying to thy dust :
'I am one colour with thy love, I am the partner of thy affection.'
In the house of water and clay this heart is desolate without thee ;
O Beloved, enter the house, or I will leave it.

There has come forth a wondrous people, that the mys-

O watchman, be wakeful : it behoves not a watchman to sleep. •

are candles and torches,

For to-night the teeming world gives birth to the world

In me there is Another by whom these eyes sparkle ;
 If water scalds, 'tis by fire ; understand this.
 I have no stone in my hand, I have no quarrel with any one,
 I deal harshly with none, because I am sweet as a

 Mine eye, then, is from that source and from another

Happy the moment when we are seated in the palace,
 thou and I,

With two forms and with two figures but with one soul,
 thou and I.

The colours of the grove and the voice of the birds will bestow immortality

At the time when we come into the garden, thou and I.

The stars of heaven will come to gaze upon us ;

We shall show them the moon itself, thou and I.

Thou and I, individuals no more, shall be mingled in ecstasy,

Joyful, and secure from foolish babble, thou and I.

All the bright-plumed birds of heaven will devour their hearts with envy

In the place where we shall laugh in such a fashion,
 thou and I.

This is the greatest wonder, that thou and I, sitting here in the same nook,

Are at this moment both in 'Irāq and Khorāsān, thou and I.

I went to the Master's abode and said : 'Where is the Master ?'

He said : 'The Master is in love and intoxicated and a wanderer from place to place.'

I said : 'I have an obligation, at least give me a clue ; I am the Master's friend : nay, indeed, I am no enemy.'

They replied : 'The Master is fallen in love with the Gardener ;

Seek him in gardens or on the bank of a stream.'

Frenzied lovers pursue the object of their love ;

If any one has fallen in love, go, wash thy hands of him !

The fish that has known water comes not to land :

How should a lover stay in the sphere of colour and perfume ?

The frozen snow that has beheld the face of yonder Sun,
Is swallowed up by the sun, tho' it be piled in drifts.

Especially one who is the lover of our King,
 A king peerless and faithful and sweet-tempered.
 By that infinite alchemy, which none may compute or conjecture,
 Copper, as soon as it is touched, becomes gold at the command, "Return".
 Sleep the world away, and flee from the six dimensions;
 How long wilt thou roam in thy folly and bewilderment to and fro?
 Inevitably they will bring thee at last, with thy own consent,
 That thou mayst have honour and glory in the presence of the King.
 Had not there been an intruder in the company,
 Jesus would have revealed to thee the mysteries, point
 by point.
 I have closed the passage of the lips, and opened the secret way;
 I am free in one moment from the desire of speech.

O my soul, who is this, stationed in the house of the heart?

Who may occupy the royal seat save the King and the Prince?

He beckoned with his hand: 'Say, what do you desire of me?'

What does a drunken man desire except sweetmeats and a cup of wine?

Sweetmeats derived from the soul, a cup of the Absolute Light,

An eternal banquet laid in the privacy of "He is the Truth".

How many deceivers are there at the wine-drinkers' feast!

Take heed lest thou fall, O easy simple man!

Beware! do not keep, in a circle of reprobates,

Thine eye shut like a bud, thy mouth open like the rose.

The world resembles a mirror: thy Love is the perfect image;

O people, who has ever seen a part greater than the whole?

I saw my Beloved wandering about the house :

He had taken up a rebeck and was playing a tune.

With a touch like fire he was playing a sweet melody,

Drunken and distraught and bewitching from the night's carouse.

He was invoking the cup-bearer in the mode of 'Irâq :

Wine was his object, the cup-bearer was only an excuse.

The beauteous cup-bearer, pitcher in hand,

Stepped forth from a recess and placed it in the middle.

He filled the first cup with that sparkling wine—

Didst thou ever see water set on fire ?

For the sake of those in love he passed it from hand to hand,

Then bowed and kissed the lintel.

Make yourself like to the community, that you may feel spiritual joy ;

Enter the street of the tavern, that you may behold the

Drain the cup of passion, that you may not be shamed ;

Why, for an old woman's sake, do you endure so large a dowry,

And how long, for the sake of three loaves, will you look on the sword and the spear ?

Always at night returns the Beloved : do not eat opium Close your mouth against food, that you may taste the sweetness of the mouth.

Cease to behave as wolves and dogs, that you may experience the Shepherd's love.

You said: 'My foe took such an one away from me':

Go, renounce that person in order to contemplate the being of Him.

Think of nothing except the creator of thought;

Care for the soul is better than feeling care for one's bread.

Why, when God's earth is so wide, have you fallen asleep in a prison?

Avoid entangled thoughts, that you may see the explanation in Paradise.

Refrain from speaking, that you may win speech hereafter;

Abandon life and the world, that you may behold the Life of the world.

passing away ?

Fly forth from this enclosure, since thou art a bird of

Thou art a darling bosom-friend, thou art always behind

Why dost thou make thy dwelling-place in this perish-

Ideas.

Thou art a bird of the holy world, a boon-companion in the assembly of Love ;

If thou wilt remain here, 'tis a pity.

Every morning a voice comes to thee from heaven :

'When thou lay'st the dust of the way, thou win'st thy way to the goal.'

XLVII.

When I came to thy city, thou chocest a corner apart from me ;

When I went from thy city, thou didst not look upon me to say ' Farewell '.

Whether thou choosest to be kind or inclinest to rancour, Thou art all the comfort of the soul, thou art all the adornment of the feast.

The cause of thy jealousy is that thou art hidden or,
otherwise,

While thou art revealed by every atom, thou art hidden like the sun.

If thou dwell'st in seclusion, art not thou the darling of the Prince ?

And if thou rendest the veil, thou hast rent the veils of all.

By thee the heart of infidelity is confounded, by thy wine the head of faith is intoxicated ;

Thou dost rob all of sense, thou dost draw all towards thee.

All roses are a prey to December, all heads a prey to wine :

Both these and those thou redeemest from the hand of death.

- چو وفا نبود در گُل چه رَوی تو سوی هر گُل

Since in the rose there is no constancy, why do you approach every rose?

On thee alone is reliance: thou art the stay and support.
 If a few cut their hands on account of Joseph's face,
 Thou hast bereft of soul and reason two hundred spiritual Josephs. •

Thou mouldedst of foul and fair the form of a man,
 That he may flee two leagues from the odour of foulness.
 Thou mak'st him a morsel of dust that he may become pure herbage;

He is free from filth when thou hast breathed into him
 a soul.

Come, O heart, fare heavenward, fare to the divine pasture,
 Since thou hast grazed awhile in the pasture of cattle.
 Set thy whole desire on that whereof thou hast no hope,
 For thou hast come thus far from original hopelessness.
 Be silent that the lord who gave thee language may speak,

For as he fashioned a door and lock, he has also made a key. •

XLVIII.

At last thou hast departed and gone to the Unseen ;
 'Tis marvellous by what way thou wentest from the world.

Thou didst strongly shake thy wings and feathers, and having broken thy cage
 Didst take to the air and journey towards the world of soul. •

Thou wert a favourite falcon, kept in captivity by an old woman :

When thou heard'st the falcon-drum thou didst fly away into the Void.

Thou wert a love-lorn nightingale among owls :
 The scent of the rose-garden reached thee, and thou didst go to the rose-garden.

Thou didst suffer sore head-ache from this bitter ferment ;
 At last thou wentest to the tavern of Eternity.

Straight as an arrow thou didst make for the mark of bliss ;

Thou didst speed like an arrow to that mark from this bow.

The world gave thee false clues, like a ghoul :
 Thou took'st no heed of the clue, but wentest to that which is without a clue.
 Since thou art now the sun, why dost thou wear a tiara,
 Why seek a girdle, since thou art gone from the middle?
 I have heard that thou art gazing with distorted eyes upon thy soul :
 Why dost thou gaze on thy soul, since thou art gone to the soul of Soul?
 O heart, what a wondrous bird art thou, that in chase of divine rewards
 Thou didst fly with two wings to the spear-point, like a shield !
 The rose flees from autumn—O what a fearless rose art thou
 Who didst go loitering along in the presence of the autumn wind !
 Falling like rain from heaven upon the roof of the terrestrial world
 Thou didst run in every direction till thou didst escape
 by the conduit.
 Be silent and free from the pain of speech : do not slumber,
 Since thou hast taken refuge with so loving a Friend.

NOTES.

I.

اَكْثَرُ تَوْعَاشِقِ عَشْقَى ۱ — Love, implying loss of self-hood and by that means perfect union with the divine Beloved, is the living rock on which all mysticism is based.

حیا — cf. the ḥadīṣ: الْحَيَاءُ يَمْنَعُ الْإِيمَانَ, Shame hinders faith, and Redhouse's Maṣnavī, p. 115: Ḥusām-u'ddīn having publicly spoken in praise of certain individuals who bore an extremely bad character...complaint was made to Jalāl, who confirmed what Ḥusām had said, and remarked: "God looks only to man's heart. Those seemingly lewd fellows are really God-loving saints." Cf. also :

مېو مردِ شرم و ناموسی چو مجنون فاش باید شد
چنان مستورا هرگز نیابد کس بمستوری
(T. 93. 1).

Since you are moved by feelings of shame and honour,
you must become manifest, like Majnūn ;

One concealed as He is will never be found by concealment (continence).

۲ رُوش — the Sūfī path (طریقت) whereby the pilgrim arrives at true knowledge of God.

ناموس — Greek νόμος (see Dozy's Supplément aux Dictionnaires Arabes, under نَمَس).

- حديث — I have not been able to discover any tradition to this effect. Possibly the word is used here, as often, in a non-technical sense.

بصفا — sincerely, without prejudice.

٣ مجنون — literally, possessed by the جن. Majnūn is the Orlando Furioso of eastern romance; in Persia the love of Majnūn and Lailā has long been a brilliant theme for poetry: mention may be made here of the maṣnavīs by Nizāmī, Jāmī, and Hātifī. Majnūn represents the soul seeking union with God, who is the Beloved par excellence.

كُزِين — Orientals regard lunacy as a special mark of divine favour.

Observe the assonance شیدا شید, مجنون جنون. This figure, in which two or more words of like sound and derived (or at least apparently derived) from the same root are brought together, is called اشتقاق, according to others اشتقاق.

ز زهر چشید ٤ — suffered the agony of separation from his Beloved. Cf. Hāfiz (i. 256. 2): زهر جدائی : چشاند.

فنا — self-annihilation ‘which is attained by absorption in the glory of the Creator and by contemplation of the Truth’ (Kitābu ’tta’rīfāt), ‘to die spiritually, so far as the senses are concerned, during life’ (Juan de la Cruz). See Whinfield’s Maṣnavī, p. xxvi seq., with the passages there referred to, De Sacy’s Pendnāmeḥ, p. liv, Gulshani Rāz, 334 seq., with Lāhijī’s commentary, and cf. also Kor. ii. 88.: Desire death if ye are sincere, and the ḥadīṣ: مُوتُوا قَبْلَ أَنْ تَمُوتُوا, Die before ye die.

عنكبوت ٥—This may allude to an incident in the Prophet's flight from Mecca, when a spider spun its web across the mouth of a cavern where he had taken refuge, and thus caused his enemies to abandon their pursuit.

'Aṭṭār says (Mantiqu 'ṭṭair, 14):

عنكبوتی را بحکمت دام داد

• صدر عالم را درو آرام داد

He providentially gave a snare to the spider,
And therein rendered the Prince of the world secure.

رَبِّیَ الْأَعْلٰی—these words do not occur in the Kor'ān, but were probably suggested by Pharaoh's boast: أَنَا رَبُّكُمْ (Kor. LXXIX. 24). One of the Bāb's titles was حَضْرَتِ رَبِّیَ الْأَعْلٰی (Browne's Episode of the Bāb, Vol. II. p. 229).

چگونه باشد ٦—what is earthly beauty compared with immediate vision of God?

أَسْرٰی بَعْبِدِه لَیْلًا—Kor. XVII. 1. A full description and mystical interpretation of Mohammed's night-journey to heaven is quoted from Abū 'Alī Ibn Sīnā (Avicenna) in the Dabistān, Vol. III. p. 177 seq. The second foot in this line is — — — instead of — — —, and as a general rule, for two short syllables occurring together, even if they do not belong to the same foot, one long syllable may be substituted. Cf. note on XI. ١٥.

دواوین ٧—Arabic broken plural of دیوان, which is the name usually given to a collection of short poems, e.g. ghazals and qasīdas. As it seems unlikely that Waisa and Rāmīn formed the subject of any such collection, the term must be extended to include the maṣnavīs bearing this title by Nizāmī 'Arūzī of Samarcand and Fakhru'ddīn Jurjānī, both of whom flourished under the Seljūqs. The former was a pupil of Mu'izzī and one of the poets at Sultān Sanjar's court (479—552 A.H.).

وَمَق (lover) and عَذْرَا (virgin) are the hero and heroine of the oldest poetical romance in Persian literature, by 'Unṣurī (died 431 A.H.), which, like that of Waisa and Rāmīn, is said to have appeared in Pehlevī, under the Sāsānians, and to have been subsequently lost.

۸ خُورْدَنِیْسْت — patiendum est. For this form see Platts, Persian Grammar, Part I. § 95.

دَرِیَا — wash away every stain of 'self' in the ocean of divine love.

۹ پِستِی — self-abasement, according to the proverb :
سُمُوْ اَلْمَرْءِ فِی اَلْتَّوَادِعِ, Humility exalts a man.

—ecstasy, loss of personal consciousness, produced by contemplation of the beauty of God. The torrent, furiously rushing along in its low channel, unites these qualities.

۱۰ مِیَانِ حَلَقَهٗ عَشَّاقِ الْخ — among spiritual disciples you will attain the highest degree, if you serve him who is highest.

نَگِیْن — 'Omar Khayyām, having declared that Man is the final cause of creation, adds :

این لائرهٔ جهان چو انگشتریست
بی هیچ شکی نقشِ نِگینش مائیم

This circle of the universe resembles a ring ;
Unquestionably we are the signet engraved on its bezel.
(Quatrain 340).

Cf. also Hāfiz (II. 98. 3): سرجلقه رندان, ringleader of the intoxicated.

بگوش حلقه—the play on حلقه and بگوش cannot be preserved in English.

ننگین in this line may be referred either to God or to the پیر (Director) who is here Shamsi Tabriz, and throughout the Dīvān it will be found, for the most part, impossible to distinguish between them.

زیان کرد ۱۲—cf. the common phrase سود نکرد, it was of no use. Latin and French have similar idioms (damnum facere and faire une perte).

۱۳ With this couplet cf. Hāfiz (III. 102. 6):

My heart is weary of hypocrisy and of the drum
under the blanket;

Come, let me raise my standard at the door of the wine-house.

دُهل بزیرِ کلیم—do not conceal what is perfectly obvious, proclaim your love. •

صحرا—the desert of Absolute Being, in which the phenomenal world is a mirage (Gulshani Rāz, 843) or the world itself. Cf.

ا چه بود زمینِ امکان

کآنست کتابِ حق تعالی (T. 114. 5).

What is the desert? This contingent universe,
Which is the book of God most High.

بگوشِ جان ۱۴—because they would be inaudible to the sensual ear. •

‘کَنَبِدِ خَضْرَا—the sky, which Orientals, perhaps owing to some optical peculiarity, often see as green (cf. Garcin de Tassy, La poésie religieuse chez les Persans, p. 24, note), or rather they consider blue and green to be merely varieties of the same colour. This metaphor is a favourite one with our poet. Cf. a passage from Browne’s ‘The Modern Traveller’ quoted in Rosen’s Maṣnavī, p. xx: The splendid Tekieh (or monastery) of Mewlawy dervishes (at Konieh) is the first among such buildings in the Turkish Empire, and is universally celebrated. Its cupola covered with shining green tiles is conspicuous from afar.

۱۵ قبا—the body, ‘this fleshly dresse’ (Henry Vaughan).

توهای و هوئی فلك الخ—when the soul is no longer blinded by sensual desires and affections, it perceives that all phenomena are intoxicated and reeling with the wine of love. Cf. Gulshani Rāz, 825 seq.

۱۶ مَنَزَه ز زیر و از بالا—illimitable, transcending Space.

۱۷ آفتاب—an allusion to Shamsi Tabrīz (شمس = sun, in Arabic).

۱۸ خموش کردم—so end a large number of these poems. Speech is only the prelude to silence: true worshippers are ‘breathless with adoration’ (cf. Whinfield’s Maṣnavī, pp. 5, 261, 326).

II.

۱ بیابان ما—cf. note on I. ۱۳. But this is rather the desert of Love, the راهِ پُر خون (Maṣnavī, 4. 7) which Hāfiz thought easy until he tried it, and then :

Whichever side I turned, new terrors lay;
 Beware of this dark waste, this endless way!
 Even in our dreams no end—pass, one by one,
 A thousand stages, and 'tis scarce begun.
 (I. 214. 7 seq.).

جهان در جهان ۲—this obscure phrase may refer (1) to the different categories of being, i.e. the series of emanations which connect the phenomenal world with the Divinity (cf. Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 77), or (2) to Man, who is a world within a world, the microcosm contained in the macrocosm. See Gulshani Rāz, 140 seq. [in 144, second miṣrā', read بِیْ یَبْصُرُ وَ بِیْ یَسْمَعُ, 'by me he sees and by me he hears': the words are taken from the tradition quoted on p. 15].

معنای—phenomenal appearance opposed to صورت, spiritual reality.

کدامست الخ—when Man annihilates his lower nature and divests himself of all that is not God, he no longer has anything in common with the world of illusions around him.

بُریده سری ۳—true Knowledge is attainable only by فنا. Cf. Hāfiz, I. 534. 4:

How wonderful is the path of Love,
 Where the headless one lifts up his head (is exalted).
 and see note on XXXVII. ۱۶.

سوی میدانِ ما—cf.

بی دست و پا چو گشوئی سوی ویشم غلطان

چوگانِ زلفِ مارا اینسو همیدواند

(T. 174. 6^a). ••

Without head and feet, like a ball, we are rolling towards Him ;

In this direction the bat of His curl is driving us on.

[For the mystical signification of زلف see Gulshani Rāz, 763 seq. It is used here because its crookedness makes it resemble the چوگان (polo-stick).]

۵-۶—What if God should bestow on us the beatific vision of eternal Truth, as He did, e.g. to Moses at Mt Sinai?

زبانهای مرغان ما—a reference to Kor. xxvii. 16: ‘and Solomon was David’s heir, and he said, O people, we have been taught the language of birds.’

۶ يك مرغ—the hoopoe (هُدُود) which Solomon sent with a letter to Bilqīs, queen of Sheba (Kor. xxvii. 20–45).

طوق—cf. the Arabic expression: طَوَّقَنِي نِعْمَةً, ‘he conferred upon me a permanent badge of favour’ (Lane, under طوق), and see XL. ۹, with note on قِلَادَه. The ring-dove is called in Arabic ذَاتُ الطَّوْقِ.

۷ امکان—when Not-being (عَدَم) reflects the qualities of Being (حَقُّ) and thus loses to a certain extent its own negative and phenomenal character, it receives the name of امکان, Contingent being. This is the state of Man, in whom the flesh and the spirit are forever at war.

۸ چگونہ زمر دم—Ibnu’l Fārid says in his Tā’iyya (36th beyt):

Thro’ weakness I refrain from uttering many things (troubles);

By my tongue they shall not be recorded, altho’, if I spoke, they would become less.

زَدَن also means 'to speak,' and so possibly here.

این پریشانِ ما—adjective used as noun (see Vullers, under پَرِشَن). It may however be translated: our distressed one, i.e. the soul. Cf. بَمِستَانِ شُما = to your drunken eyes (Hāfiz, i. 4. 6).

۹ چه—چه—both—and.

چه کبکان چه بازان—great and small, high and low, go hand in hand to seek God. Hāfiz refers to the partridge being hunted by the falcon (i. 454. 9, and 532. 4), and this explains the reading of B, بازانِ شان, their falcons, i.e. the falcons pursuing them.

کَرِهستانِ ما—'the shining table-lands To which our God Himself is moon and sun' (Tennyson).

۱۰ کَیوانِ ما—Saturn, according to the Ptolemaic system, is lord of the seventh heaven.

۱۱ عرش—the ninth and highest heaven.

جولانِ ما—alluding to the سماع or mystic dance, which represents allegorically the harmonious movement of the spheres (see Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 182).

۱۲ هواهایِ عرش و فلک—a play on the two meanings of هوا, air and desire. Even Heaven, in so far as it rests upon a phenomenal basis, is an obstacle to union with the Absolute. Cf.

کُمرِ کعبه است و زمزم و رَجَّت است و کَوثر

چون پرده گُشت دلرا درهم درید باید

(T. 187. 2^a).

Tho' the Ka'ba and Zamzam exist, and tho' Paradise and Kauṣar exist,

Since they are a veil to the soul, you must tear the veil asunder.

۱۳ مپرس—I have abandoned with reluctance the reading of L and V, مپرس. If it be kept, we must take دستان as the plural of دست and translate: Inquire concerning us whose hands are crushed, i.e. whose state is one of extreme weakness and humiliation. Cf.

خود دامنش نگیرد الا شکسته دستی

اکنون بلند گردم چون جور کرد ۲ (T. 248. 4).

Indeed, none may grasp his skirt save with bruised hands:
Now that oppression has abased me, I become exalted.

۱۴ صلاح الحق و دین — for Ṣalāḥu'ddīn Zarkūb
(Goldsmith) see Redhouse's Maṣnavī, p. 110.

III.

۱ استاره را — cf.

I hold converse nightly with every star
From desire of the splendour of thy moon-like face.
(Hāfiz, II. 468. 5).

۲ بتابش — the pointing تابش is also possible.

۳ دلبر خون خواره را — for the cruelty of the Beloved see Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 30 seq. Grief and pain are often synonymous with love in the language of mystics.

۴ سو بسو گشتم — i.e. in the سماع (cf. Ibnu'l Fārid, Tā'iyya, beyt 434).

طِفْلِ دِلِه — cf. the same author (ib. beyts 435 and 436):

When it (the child) tosses about in longing for one who shall sing it asleep, and yearns
 To fly to its original home,
 It is hushed by being rocked in its cradle
 When the hands of its nurse set the cradle moving.

جان همچو مسیح است بکھوارۀ قالب

(T. 291. 8). آن مریم بندنده کھوارۀ ما کو

The soul is like the Messiah in the cradle of the body;
 Where is the Mary who fashioned our cradle?

ز کُریه‌اش ه — scan zi giryash (— —).

خمار — the relapse from ecstasy into consciousness.

ساقیا — the cup-bearer is God, who intoxicates all creation with the rapture of love (see Gulshani Rāz, 805 seq.).

نرگس خماره — the final ه in خماره does not here denote the feminine gender but has an intensive force (see Wright's Arabic Grammar, Vol. I. p. 139). The word is used adjectivally - مست. Cf. چشم خمارش (T. 200. 10^a), and نرگسدان خمارش (T. 215. 1^a).

IV.

کُنْجی بُدم من در نِهان ۲ — this famous tradition, which innumerable Sūfī poets and commentators have illustrated and embellished (cf. especially a beautiful passage in Jāmī's Yūsuf ū Zulaikhā, p. 16), runs in Arabic:

كُنْتُ كَنْزًا مَخْفِيًّا فَأَحْبَبْتُ أَنْ أُعْرَفَ فَخَلَقْتُ الْخَلْقَ لِيَكُنْ

أُعْرَفَ, I was a hidden treasure and I desired to be known, so I created the creation in order that I might be known.

آئینه کردم عیان ۳—every object reflects one or more of the divine attributes, but Man, as the microcosm, reflects them all. ‘Man,’ says Lāhijī (Gulshani Rāz, 141), ‘is the eye of the world, whereby God sees His own works.’

رویش دل و پشتش جهان—the earthly part of Man is compared to the back, his eternal attributes to the face of a mirror. He is ‘blackened on one side with the darkness of Not-being in order to reflect Real Being’ (Lāhijī on Gulshani Rāz, 265).

چون کاه جفتِ گل بود ۴—straw is mixed with clay to form a kind of stucco or mortar (کِهْتَل). Unless you are pure clay, i.e. entirely purged of self, the divine image reflected in your heart will be blurred and incomplete.

شیره نگرود می الخ ۵—cf. T. 353. 8–9, and جهان همچو عصیرید کُرفتار

چون نیک بجوشید ازین خمِ بدر آئید

(T. 197. 11).

Ye are imprisoned like grape-juice in the jar of the world ;

Ye will come forth from this jar, when ye are well fermented.

زین سان که رفتی آمدی ۶—i.e. you return to me no better than when you entered the world.

آلای ما—suggested perhaps by the verse which runs as a refrain through Kor. LV. : فَبِأَيِّ آلَاءِ رَبِّكُمَا تُكَذِّبَانِ .

این کیمیای نادره ۷—the transforming influence of divine grace.

گاه = مسرا in beyt ۴, whatever in Man's nature is false and unessential.

این آفتاب ۸—Shamsi Tabrīz.

—the perpetual raying out or emanation of the Absolute : hence grace, inspiration.

بنشست عیسی بر خری ۹—St Matthew, ch. xxi. Jesus mounted on the ass represents the soul degraded by contact with the body. Cf.

عیسی مریم بفلك رفت و فرو ماند خرش
من بزمین ماندم و شد جانبِ بالا دل من
(T. 268. 8^a).

Jesus, son of Mary, went to heaven and his ass remained below ;

I remain on the earth but my spirit has flown to the sky.

See Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 85, and 'Attār, Manṭiqu 'ttair, 621.

باد صبا—in allusion to the quickening breath of Jesus, whom Moslems call روح الله (cf. Kor. iv. 169). Hāfiz has عیسی صبا (I. 228. 3), and مسیحانفسی, of the Spring (I. 540. 1).

سر ساز همچون آب جو ۱۰—see note on I. ۹, and cf.

بر روی و سر چو سیل دوان تا بجوی دو.

(T. 137. 2).

Running on face and head, like a torrent, to join the river of the Friend.

آب شوم سجده گنان تا بگلستان برسم (T. 256. 5^a).

I become water, bending low in prayer, that I may reach the rose-garden.

عقل, the intellectual faculty, involving the separation of the thinker from the object of his thought, and therefore dualistic, is constantly opposed to عشق, the spiritual faculty (intuition, illumination, inner light) which attains the truth by transcending thought.

بقا—eternal life in God, only to be gained through annihilation of self: بقا بعد الفنا.

فراموش ۱۱—here used as a noun, cf. پیشان, II. ۸.

تا محو الخ—see the passage from Ghazzālī quoted by Tholuck (Sufismus, p. 3) and translated by Whinfield on Gulshani Rāz, 411. Cf.

خود ثنا گفتن ز من ترکِ ثنا.

کاین دلیل هستی و هستی خطاست

(Maṣnavī, 7. 23).

'Tis blasphemy to praise Him: I proclaim
My 'self' extant, and 'self' is mortal shame.

V.

چمنی ۱۰—cf. Song of Solomon, ch. iv. 12 seq., and Jāmī's Bahāristān, p. ۵۹:

What care tho' mine be all the loss, tho' veiled .
 The glory and dark the vision of my desire?
 He Beauty's garden is; there gathers one .
 A rose, and one with bleeding hands a briar.

نثار—sweetmeats and small coins which are thrown among the bystanders at a wedding and on other festal occasions. •

در زاهدی شکستم ۴—(حال) in a state of ecstasy. Cf.

بی پای طواف آریم شرد در آن شاهی
 گاو مست اَلست آمد بِشکست در مَبارا
 (T. 129. 11^a).

Let us without feet make the holy circuit round the door of that King,
 For he has come intoxicated with “Am I not?” and broken our door.

See for بی پای note on II. ۳, and for اَلست note on IX. ۹.

بیقرار—spent in seeking God and devoted to the sleepless passion which he inspires. •

بدعای او ۵—the prayer of the perfect spiritual man is identical with the divine will. یاری and the pronominal suffix in خُداش refer to the same person, probably Shamsi Tabrīz. •

که بخونِ ماست تِشنه —see note on III. ۳.

مانستن—ماند ۶.

چَنک زُهره —for the simile, see note on XVI. ۲۲. The sign of Zuhra or Anāhīd, the celestial Venus, is in the third heaven. She leads the starry choirs to music. According to the legend Zuhra, a mortal woman, was beloved by two angels, Hārūt and Mārūt, whom she beguiled to tell her 'the ineffable name,' and by means of this talisman gained admission to heaven. See Mīrkhwānd's Rauḡatu 'ṣṣafā translated by Rehatsek, Vol. i. p. 75 seq. and Sale's note on Kor. ii. 96.

کُستِه تار — for then all earthly discords will be drowned in the divine harmony.

√ حلاوتِ غمش — cf. Hāfiz (ii. 252. 3) :

Thine eye hath wrought my ruin, but so my love
Send it, a thousand welcomes to the woe!

غمش includes the sorrow of the soul caused by her passionate longing to be united with God, and also the pains which he inflicts either as a probation or as the result of jealousy (see note on xxv. ۱۲).

۸ چه عروسیست در جان — see Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 34, where the poet makes an apology for calling God by this name.

نِگار — the ornamental design traced with henna on the hands and feet of a bride.

۱۰ تن تیره — because it is عَدَم (Not-being).

جهانِ تن — cf.

جهانِ عقل چو روم و جهانِ طبع چو زنک

میانِ هر دو فتاده است کارزار و جهاد

(T. 164. 3).

The world of Intelligence is like Rūm (white) and the world of Nature like Æthiopia (black);

Strife and warfare has fallen out between them.

۹۰۱۱ بچهار عنصر — see note on viii. ۴.

VI.

تلخی—like بلاي نفي in Gulshani Rāz, 402, the mortification of all desires, whether sensual or intellectual. True spirituality (to quote Juan de la Cruz) seeks in God the bitter more than the agreeable, prefers suffering to solace, would rather lack all good for God's sake than possess it, is better pleased with dryness and affliction than with sweet communications: knowing that in this it follows Christ and denies self, instead of peradventure seeking self in God, which is against Love.

فقر—Mohammed said: أَلْفَقْرُ فَخْرِي, Poverty is my pride, and again أَلْفَقْرُ سَوَادُ الْوَجْهِ فِي الدَّارَيْنِ, Poverty is blackness of face (dishonour) in both worlds (see his own explanation of the inconsistency in Malcolm's History of Persia, Vol. II. p. 268, note). The Sūfīs have given these sayings a mystical turn. فقر becomes poverty of 'self,' i.e. self-annihilation, and by سَوَادُ الْوَجْهِ they mean the darkness which is nothing but excess of light betokening the proximity of Being (cf. Gulshani Rāz, 123 seq.). 'I tell you, by the eternal Truth, that ye are not rightly poor while ye have a will to perform the will of God, or any desire of God and eternity; for the poor man is he who wills, knows, and desires nothing' (Eckhart, Deutsche Mystiker, Vol. II. p. 281).

آنچه نبردست و هم الخ ۲—cf. 1 Corinthians, ch. ii. 9: Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

قبله—the Moslem turns his face in prayer towards the Ka'ba, the mystic directly to God.

اغانى—نعمت ۴ in the next line suggests the emendation نغمت (sweet voice, melody). نغمت, however, does not seem to occur, and the change from نغمه, as the word is commonly written in Persian, to نعمت, is less easy.

آرد او—for this repetition of the pronoun cf. xxxvi. ۵.

شَرچِه نخوانی—even if thou dost not call me into thy presence.

اغانى—Arabic broken plural of أُغْنِيَّة from the root

در رکعات نماز الخ ۵—cf. T. 231. 9^a seq.

اگر نه رویِ دل اندر برابرت دارم
من این نمازِ حسابِ نمازِ شمارم
ز عشقِ رویِ تو من رو بقبله آوردم
و گرنه من ز نماز و ز قبله بیزارم

Unless I have the face of my heart towards thee,
I deem prayer unworthy to be reckoned as prayer.
If I turned my face to the qibla, 'twas for love of thine ;
Otherwise, I am weary both of prayer and qibla.

سبع مثانی—there are various interpretations of these words : the most probable is that which makes them refer to the seven verses of the opening Sūra of the Kor'ān (الْفَاتِحَة).

✓ Perhaps it is better to regard this couplet as complete in itself, and translate :

If a never-ceasing bounty should offer kingdoms
And lay the universe before me, thou art still my hidden treasure.

For گنجِ نهانی see note on iv. ۲.

٨ عشقِ فلانی — the love of God. •

١٠ عمرِ اوانیست — cf. • •

باطنِ ما چو فلک تا بابد مُستغنی است
 گُرچه روزی دو سه در نقش و نگارِ بشریم
 کوزه‌ها دان تو صُور را و ز هر شربتِ فکر
 همچو کوزه همه هر لحظه تهی ایم و پریم
 شربت از کوزه نروید بُود از جایِ دگر
 همچو کوزه ز اُصولِ مددش بیخبریم
 • (T. 252. 2).

Our celestial spirit is free to eternity,
 Tho' for a short while we have the shape and figure of man.
 Know that phenomenal forms are pitchers: with draughts
 of the Ideal,
 Like a pitcher, we all are being filled and emptied
 continually.
 The draught is not derived from the pitcher, it comes from another source ;
 Like the pitcher we are ignorant of the springs which replenish it.

اِنا — sing. اوانی

بی تو چه کار آیدم الخ — cf.

عمر که بی عشق رفت هیچ حسابش مگیر
 آبِ حیات است عشق در دل و جانِش پذیر
 • (T. 203. 13).

Prize not at all life that has passed without love ;
 Love is the Water of Life : receive it in thy heart
 and soul.

رنج اوانی —the tribulation which the soul suffers in the world.

رنجی که مرا از اوانی است —cf. note on ۱. But رنج اوانی مرا may be construed together =

امان —literally : not even an (cry for quarter) remained to me, i.e. for love's sake I was prepared to sacrifice all. Prof. Bevan suggests that امانی here may be the plural of اُمْنِيَّةُ, object of desire. هیچ followed by a plural is found in Khāqānī (500—582 A.H.). According to the Bahāri 'Ajam (Vullers, under هیچ) this use is rare and archaic. But a stronger argument, to my mind, against taking امانی in the sense proposed is the occurrence, which can hardly be accidental, of ایمن in the next line.

مدد —this term is employed by Jalālu'ddīn to denote the perpetual replenishment of the phenomenal world by a succession of emanations from the Absolute.

جانِ جهانی —as God is all, and all is God, he who is absorbed in the divine essence (مَجْذُوبِ مُطْلَق) becomes identical with it. Hence the أَنَا الْحَقُّ, I am God, of Manṣūr Ḥallāj and the سُبْحَانِي, Praise be to me!, of Bāyazīd. And this is what our poet means when he says, e.g.:

هم دزدِ عیاران منم هم رنجِ بیماران منم
هم ابرو هم باران منم در باغها باریده ام
(T. 258. 4).

I am the theft of rogues, I am the pain of the sick,
I am both cloud and rain, I have rained in the gardens.

گُوهرِ معنِیِ اوست الخ ۱۳ —at first sight these words seem to defy the rules of grammar. Obviously the sense is: جان و دلم پُر از گُوهرِ معنِیِ او شده است and this can be obtained from the text only by treating گُوهرِ معنِیِ او پُر as a compound adjective. In such formations پُر is usually prefixed, but cf. 'Atṭār, Mantiqū 'ttair, 525 :

چاه چون بِشنود آن تابش نبود
لاجرم خون پُر شد و آبش نبود

او سَك —a play on او, He (God), and او or عَو, the sound of a dog's bark.

ثالث —alluding to the doctrine of the Trinity (see Kor. iv. 169, with Sale's note, v. 77).

ثانی —as in the Magian religion.

بروح جسم نکرد التِّفات ۱۴ —during this life the body is conscious of the soul's superiority, but not in the divine presence, for then it is non-existent.

تبریز را ۱۵ —the poet puns on the double meaning of تبریز: (1) the city of that name, and (2) manifestation (from Arabic بَرَزَ) with a reference to عیانی.

VII.

مهی ۱ —this is perhaps the most frequent of the inexhaustible images under which Oriental writers represent beauty.

ندیدش فلک بخواب —a not uncommon metaphor to signify what is incapable of being conceived. Cf.

ان شکریرا که مصرهیچ ندیدش بخواب
(T. 219. 6^a).

آب—cf. Song of Solomon, ch. viii.
7: 'Many waters cannot quench love.'

۲ خراب—'a man of true self-abandonment must be unbuilt from the creature' (Suso, quoted in Vaughan's Hours with the Mystics, Vol. I. p. 271). And Meister Eckhart says: forasmuch as thou hast despoiled and denuded (verwüestet) thyself of all attributes, God must needs enter wholly into thy being and faculties, as it is written: 'the voice crieth in the wilderness (wüeste).' Let this eternal voice cry in thee, as it willeth, and be empty (wüeste) of thyself and of all things (Deutsche Mystiker, Vol. II. p. 22).

۳ میر شرابخانه—see note on III. v.

۴ ندا رسد—cf. Eckhart quoted above.

پیاله—Greek φιάλη.

۵ بر کند الخ—cf.

بامِ خانه چون حجابست از جمالِ آفتاب
با کندِ عشقِ حق زوتر فرو کن بامرا
(T. 116. 4).

The roof of the house is, as it were, a veil over the sun's beauty.

Make haste to demolish the roof with the mattock of divine love.

۶ مرا بیاب—i.e. 'you cannot find me: the drop is lost in the ocean.'

۷ خورشید—Nominativus pendens, cf. x. ۲.

دلہای چون سحاب—the izāfat is affixed because چون is equivalent to an adjective. Cf. سمرقند چو قند, sweet Samarcand (Maṣnavī, 8. 19).

VIII.

۱ مرد خدا—the perfect Sūfī.

سیر بُود بی کباب—in accordance with the tradition :
الْجُوعُ طَعَامُ اللَّهِ يُحْيِي بِهِ أَبْدَانُ الصَّادِقِينَ, Fasting is the food of God whereby he revives the bodies of the sincere.

۲ والہ و حیران—see note on I. ۱۰.

۳ شاہ بُود—i.e. in the spiritual world. Cf. Hāfiz (I. 366. 6) :

Despise not thou the poor who Love obey ;
Unbelted monarchs, crownless kings are they.

The same idea is found in a poem by Abū 'l 'Aṭāhiya (Transactions of the Ninth Congress of Orientalists, Vol. II. p. 114) to which Prof. Bevan has drawn my attention :

If thou seekest the most noble of all mankind,
Behold a king in beggar's garb !

گنج بُود در خراب—it is a well-known Oriental fancy, that treasures guarded by inviolable talismans lie buried in the ruins and remains of ancient splendour, e.g. the site of Persepolis.

۴ Bodies are composed of the four elements, earth, water, fire, and air. The 'man of God,' casting off this phenomenal vesture, which does not belong to his true essence and which only veils the divine principle within him, 'breaks through to the Oneness.' Cf.

در ابر و در خاکم در آتش و در بادم
این چار بگرد من اما نه ازین چارم
(T. 235. 5).

I am in water and earth and fire and air;
These four around me, yet of these four I am not.
and

از آب و آتش نیستم و ز باد سرکش نیستم
خاک منقش نیستم من بر همه خندیده ام
(T. 258. 6).

I am not of water nor fire, I am not of the froward wind;

I am not moulded clay: I have mocked (transcended) them all.

بحر بود بی گران ه —he is absorbed in the Sea of Absolute Being.

بارد در بی سحاب —he can perform miracles, because his will is identical with the divine Will. The metaphor is drawn from the notion, found in Pliny, that the oyster is impregnated by rain-drops, which in due course become pearls. Cf. Gulshani Rāz, 568 seq., Sa'di's Bāstān, p. 230.

دارد صد ماه و چرخ ۶ —mystics dwell in the spiritual universe, of which the visible one is a faint inglorious reflection, 'solemque suum, sua sidera norunt.'

عالم از ۷ —scan | — — —|. Any short syllable may be lengthened before ۱. Cf. I. ۶, VI. ۱۲, ۱۵, etc.

نیست فقیه از کتاب —see note on IV. ۱۰. Mere learning will never enable a man to know God. 'Mind is nothing but disease, And natural health is ignorance,' i.e. inspiration.

⁸ زَان سَوِي كَفَرَسْت وَ دِين —the Truth is independent of outward forms: it shines as brightly in the tavern as in the mosque or the church; moreover, the religion of the heart, which alone has value, is not the monopoly of any particular creed. In reality all creeds are one. Cf. a curious passage (T. 54. 3^a):

این زمان و آن زمان بیضه است و مرغی گاندر اوست
 مُظْلِم و اشکسته‌پر باشد حقیر و مُسْتَهَان
 کُفَر و ایمان دان درین بیضه سفید و زرده‌را
 واصل و فارق میانشان بَرَزَخٌ لَا یَبْغِیَان
 بیضه‌را چون زیرِ پَرِ خویش پرورد از کَرَم
 کُفَر و دین فانی شد و شد مرغِ وَحْدَتِ پَرِفْشان

This world and that world are the egg, and the bird within it

Is in darkness and bruised of wing, contemptible and despised.

Regard unbelief and faith as the white and the yolk in this egg,

Between them, joining and dividing, "a barrier which they shall not pass."

When He hath graciously fostered the egg under His wing, Infidelity and religion disappear: the bird of Unity spreads its pinions.

⁹ چَه خطا و صواب —the Sūfī adept is above law. Whatever he does proceeds directly from God, just as a flute produces harmonies or discords at the will of the musician.

⁹ عَدَم —the created world, which considered per se is

Not-being, although it may be said to exist as a manifestation of the Creator.

عالی رِکاب—cf. Wordsworth's 'trailing clouds of glory do we come From God who is our home.' But Jalālu'ddīn refers to the second birth of dying to the world and absorption in the Divinity.

۱۰ هستِ نِهان—Jāmī, in the Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 20 seq., asserts on the authority of the Kashfu 'l Mahjūb, that there are 4000 saints 'unacquainted with each other and ignorant of their exalted state, who are always hidden from themselves and others.'

مَنْ طَلَبَ وَجَدَ وَجَدَ—cf. the ḥadīṣ: مَنْ طَلَبَ وَجَدَ وَجَدَ, he who seeks earnestly shall find.

IX.

This ghazal was sent by the poet Sa'dī to Shamsu'ddīn Hindī, prince of Shīrāz, who had asked him 'to select the best ode, with the most sublime thoughts, that he knew of as existing in Persian, and to send it to him for presentation to the great Khān of the Moguls' (Redhouse's Maṣnavī, p. 28).

۱ عزم تماشا کراست—not as Redhouse: 'to witness our departure who'll be found?' تماشا, like تفرّج, is the term applied to a walk taken for diversion or recreation.

۲ ما بفلك بوده ایم—see note on XVII. ۱.

۳ وَز مَلِكِ افزونتریم—a ḥadīṣ attributed to 'Alī says that angels have knowledge, but not lust and anger, beasts anger and lust, while man has all three. Therefore if man subdue lust and anger, and strive to attain perfect knowledge, he is above the angels, who attain perfection, as it were by instinct, without any choice or conscious volition. The text of the ḥadīṣ, with a commentary, will be found in the Maṣnavī, 336. 5, and for a discussion of the whole subject see Akhlāqī Jalālī, p. 23 seq., where the following lines are quoted :

آدمی زاد طُرفه معجونِ نیست
از فرشته سرشته و حیوان
گُر کند میلِ این شود کم از این
وَر کند قصدِ آن شود به از آن

Angel and beast Man's wondrous leaven compose :
To these inclining less than these he grows,
But if he means the angel, more than those.

عالمِ خاک از کجا الخ ۴ —a variation of the well-known verse :

ت خاکرا با عالمِ پاک

کجا.....کجا is a very common idiom, to express contrast.

۵ جوان —i.e. flourishing.

دادنِ جانِ کارِ ما —cf. Hāfiz (I. 476. 7) :

Not here, O Hāfiz, thou should'st timidly deny
The lover's lightest duty, for love's sake to die.

مُصطفی —'the Chosen one' : Mohammed, whom the Sūfīs identify with Universal Reason (عقلِ کُلّ), the first emanation from the Absolute. See Gulshani Rāz, 19.

وَالضَّحَى ۶ —Kor. xciii. 1.

۷ مه شکافت —a famous miracle of the Prophet's.

گداست —because her light is borrowed from the sun.

در دلِ ما الخ^۸—referring to the dissolution of personality in the divine effulgence. ‘The fissure of the moon typifies nothing else but renunciation of the external for the internal’ (Dabistān, Vol. III. p. 201).

کز...چشمِ تو زآن سو چراست—lit., ‘wherefore is thine eye on the side further from...?’

أَلَسْتُ بِرَبِّكُمْ^۹—the words أَلَسْتُ بِرَبِّكُمْ, Am I not your Lord? (Kor. vii. 171), were addressed by God, as the commentators inform us, to all future generations of men, who were drawn forth from the loins of Adam in the shape of small ants. They answered بَلَى, Yes, and thus acknowledged God’s right to judge their actions and to punish their sins. Such is the interpretation of Mohammedan orthodoxy. The Sūfīs, while accepting it in the main, lay more stress on the love, less on the power and vengeance, of God. It was the Beloved who claimed authority over the assembled souls (not insects), and love was the obligation which they avowed. Hence phrases like مَسَّتْ أَلَسْتُ (note on v. ۴). Cf. Ibnu ’l Fāriḍ, Tā’iyya, beyt 156 :

’Twas given me to draw nigh to Her on a day that had no yesterday ;

I saw Her when I made the covenant in the first moment of my existence.

کشتیِ قالبِ شِ—their bodies were effaced in the glory of the divine presence.

باز چو —i.e. in death.

دریایِ جان^{۱۰} may be understood either as Universal Soul (نفسِ کُلِّ), which comprehends all particular souls, or as Absolute Being (see Gulshani Rāz, 562 seq.). But these alternatives are only different aspects of the One.

|| دریم—or بدریا دریم || The double preposition is common in older Persian.

موج پیایی—the continual efflux of Being by which phenomena are renewed. Cf.

عالمِ جان بحرِ صفا صورتِ قالبِ کفِ او
بحرِ صفارا بنگر چنکِ درین کفِ چه زدی
هیچ قراری نبود بر سرِ دریا کفِ را
زانکه قرارش ندهد جنبشِ موجِ مددی
ف همگی آب شود تا بکناری برود
زانکه دورنگی نبود در دلِ بحرِ احدی
(T. 354. 9^a).

The world of soul is a pure sea, whereof bodily form is the foam.

Contemplate the pure sea; why have you plunged your hand into the foam?

The foam never rests on the surface of the sea,
Because the motion of the replenishing wave does not allow it to rest.

All the foam becomes water, that it may reach the shore,
Because there is no bicolority in the heart of the ocean of Unity.

|| ۲—|| ۳—a figurative description of حال (ecstasy).

|| ۳—this couplet is مُسَجَّع, i.e. it contains three middle rhymes in addition to the end-rhyme.

۱۴ صورتِ تصویر الخ — referring to such allegories as we find, e.g. in Jāmī's Salāmān ū Absāl, where Shāhi Yūnān typifies the First Intelligence (عقلِ کُلّ) and Prince Salāmān the soul of Man, while خردِ پیر will correspond to the Sage, who is above them both.

این همه روپوشاست — a 'veil' is whatever prevents union with the Deity. "Some one said to Junaid (ob. 297 A. H.): 'I find that the shaikhs of Khorāsān recognise three species of veils; the first is human nature (خلق), the second is the world, and the third is concupiscence (نفس).' 'These,' answered Junaid, 'are veils on the hearts of the vulgar; the elect are veiled otherwise, namely by regarding works, by seeking future recompense for them, and by considering the favour of God'" (Jāmī, Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 92).

در سر و چشمِ شماست ۱۵ — see note on XVII. ۱۸.

هست شمارا دو سر ۱۶ — all visible objects are but shadows of their archetypes in the Ideal world.

۱۷ That phenomena derive from the Ideal what partial existence they possess is shown by the myriads of سرهای پاک ریخته در زیر خاک, i.e. of those who have annihilated self and embraced death in order to gain perfect union with the Ideal. Cf. note on II. ۳.

۱۹ مشک, water-skin, is opposed to خُمِ می, wine-jar, as Reason, logic, scientific method, to Love, illumination, intuitive knowledge.

سقا — for 'cup-bearer' in the translation read 'water-bearer.' The word usually has a tashdīd : سقا, but may be scanned as an iambus whenever the metre requires it (cf.

T. 211. 4, 277. 8, 304. 5^a, 307. 4^a). So صَيَاد instead of صَيَاد (R. 190. 7). Conversely, a tashdīd is sometimes added (see note on XXIII. ٥).

٢٠ نورِ تو الخ—although the rays of the sun of Being are diffused and woven through creation, yet the sun itself must be distinguished from the objects which vanish as soon as its rays are withdrawn.

X.

٢ سزایِ آنکه الخ—lit. ‘the punishment of him who lives without thy face—is there a worse (punishment) than that?’

زیستن—aorist of زید.

بدتر = بتر. In the second miṣrā‘ there is a play on the double meaning of سزا.

٣ حوادث—phenomena, the outward shows of things.

بآشنا... آشنایِ تو نیست—I have noted this ambiguous use of آشنا in the following passages of the Dīvān : T. 82. 4, 83. 5, 96. 2^a, 100. 3^a, 162. 8^a (cf. also Hāfiz, I. 392. 3, II. 510. 6). The words are not connected by derivation.

٤ بقا ندارد عالم الخ—see VIII. ٩, note.

٥ رُخ تُرا—the pun is obvious.

٦ خاک بر سرِ جانی—i.e. ‘woe befall it!’ Orientals throw earth upon their heads as a sign of mourning.

٧ مُرغان—we shall often meet with this comparison of the soul to a bird.

در هوای تو—see II. ۱۱, note.

خام ۸—a novice in the mysteries of divine love, opp. to پخته.

سوخته آتش بلا—cf. with the use of the izāfat to denote agency expressions like ‘born of a woman.’ بلا is love regarded as a probation.

۱۰ نظامی—Nizāmī (535—599 A. H.) composed, while yet a young man, the mystical poem entitled Makhzanu 'l Asrār, but his fame rests mainly on four great romances, Khosrau ū Shīrīn, Lailā ū Majnūn, Iskandar-nāma, and Haft Paikar. See Bacher, Nizāmī's Leben und Werke, Ouseley's Notices of Persian Poets, p. 43, and the Encyclopaedia Britannica under ‘Nizāmī.’

آنکه بنظم میگوید—probably Lailā.

XI.

بافر ۱—Persian is exceedingly rich in these prepositional adjectives, and their number might be increased to almost any extent.

۳ با این همه = nevertheless, cf. Italian ‘con tutto ciò,’ and Spanish ‘con todo eso.’

به پیش وصالش مُکدّرست—see the explanation of سَوَادُ الْوَجْهِ, VI. ۷, note, and cf. the passages quoted from Dionysius the Pseudo-Areopagite and Ludovic Blosius in Vaughan's Hours with the Mystics, Vol. I. pp. 287—290.

دهان باز ۴—the nīmfaṭha (ă) is not pronounced after ن preceded by a long vowel, unless that vowel is a diphthong, e.g. کُون, xv. ۳, but the older poets do not always observe this condition.

اَللّٰهُ اَكْبَرُ—an exclamation of astonishment.

دل یافت دیدۀ الخ ه—this is the oculus cordis described by Hugo of St Victor: ‘an eye within...one that beholds at once the past, the present, and the future; which diffuses through all things the keen brightness of its vision; which penetrates what is hidden, investigates what is impalpable; which needs no foreign light wherewith to see, but gazes by a light of its own, peculiar to itself’ (Vaughan, Hours with the Mystics, Vol. 1. p. 305).

دل و دیدۀ پرور—a compound adjective (noun + aorist stem).

چاکرنوازیست ۶—Man is a plaything of the Deity: the favours which he receives are not the reward of merit, for whatever in him is good belongs to God.

در هوای تو ۷—cf. x. ۷.

هوا زو منورست—the pure soul is a mirror reflecting and radiating the divine sunbeams.

هر کس که بی مُراد شد الخ ۸—cf. Maṣnavī, 232, 23:

I recognise another class of the saints

Who, closing their mouths, refrain from prayer.

On account of the contentment which these exalted ones command*

Endeavour to avert what is decreed they hold unlawful.

They take an especial delight in what is decreed;

It is infidelity for them to seek escape.

Cf. the ‘sainte indifférence’ of the French Quietists, and Eckhart in Deutsche Mystiker, Vol. II. p. 623 (translated by Vaughan, Hours with the Mystics, Vol. I. p. 152).

' Nothing can fall out contrary to the desire of him who desires nothing: he may answer, like the darvīsh whom Bahlūl asked how he fared (Maṣnavī, 233, 3):

I fare as one by whose majestic will
The world revolves, floods rise and rivers flow,
Stars in their courses move; yea, death and life
Hang on his nod and fly to the ends of earth,
His ministers of mourning or of joy.

۹ هر دوزخی الخ —referring to the ḥadīṣ: On the day of resurrection when some shall enter Paradise and others Hell, whoever has in his heart so much faith as a millet-seed, God will command that he be taken from the fire and cast into Kauṣar.

او فتاد —it is impossible to decide whether the poet wrote this or اوفتاد, the older form of افتاد.

که عشق تو کوثرست —cf.

ای دل ار آب کوثرت باید
(T. 202. 13). آتش عشق را تو کوثر گیر

O heart, if thou must needs have the water of Kauṣar,
Deem Kauṣar to be the fire of love.

۱۰ پایم نمی رسد بزمین —the soul in her longing
'spernit humum fugiente penna.'

دست بر سرست —this gesture denotes sorrow and despair, cf. 'Aṭṭār, Manṭiqu 'tṭair, 215, 864; Hāfiz, II. 76. 1; 'Omar Khayyām, Quatrain 76. دست بر سر گرفتن or نهادن also means 'to salute.'

۱۲ وَرْدِ احْمَرِ—cf. Burns :

O my love's like a red red rose
That's newly sprung in June.

۱۵ كَانْ—که آن, which some MSS. read, is inadmissible. Two short syllables, namely, the last of the second and the first of the third foot, coalesce and make one long syllable (see i. ۶, note). It may be laid down as an invariable rule that when the second foot in Muzāri' is | — ۛ — — | instead of the normal | — ۛ — ۛ |, the third foot becomes | — — ۛ |. Cf. XIII. ۶, ۱۴, ۱۵ ; XXXIX. ۴, ۵, ۸, etc.

نَرَقَمَرَانِ مِنْ اَقْمَرَمَ : T. 70. 2^a—cf. اَقْمَرَسْت

XII.

۱ هَر نَقْشِ رَا الْخَ—this is the Platonic theory of Ideas.
Cf. Maṣnavī, 32, 7 :

When waves of thought from Wisdom's sea profound
Arose, they clad themselves in speech and sound.
The lovely forms a moment's sparkle gave,
Then fell and mingled with the falling wave.
So perish all things fair, to re-adorn
The Beauteous One whence all fair things were born.

۲ دِلْ بَدِ مَدَارِ—بَدِ دِلْ مَشُو (Hāfiz, II. 498. 4).

۵ مَیْنَدِشَ—for مَندِشَ.

۶—۱۰.—the evolution of Man. Cf. a fine passage in the Maṣnavī (278. 8, translated by Whinfield, p. 159) :

از جمادی مُردم و نامی شدم
وَزْ نَمَا مُردم بَحیوان سر زدم

مردم از حیوانی و ادم شدم
 پس چه ترسم کی ز مُردن کم شدم
 حمله دیگر بهمیرم از بشر
 تا هر آرم از ملائک بال و پر
 وز مَلَك هم بایدم جُستن زجو
 کُلُّ شَیْءٍ هَالِكٌ إِلَّا وَجْهَهُ
 بارِ دیگر از مَلَك قُربان شوم
 آنچه اندر وهم نآید آن شوم
 پس عَدَم کردم عَدَم چون ارغنون
 گویدم کاتا إِلَیه راجعون

۶ آمدستی—see Platts, Persian Grammar, Part I. § 98.

۱۰ برو در آن یم—lose your individuality in the Absolute.

عُمانست—the sea of ‘Omān is the southernmost of three—the others are the بَحْرُ الْفَارَسِ and the الْبَحْرَيْنِ known collectively as the Persian Gulf.

۱۱ وَلَد—see VI. ۱۳, note, and cf.

عیسی خوش‌خنده که عالم شد بمن زنده
 ولی نسبت ز حق دارم من از مریم نمیدانم
 (T. 255. 2).

I am sweet-smiling Jesus by whom the world is revived,
 But my lineage is from God: I know nought of Mary.

XIII.

۱ دِثَار—the inner garment, opp. to شِعَار ۱.

نابوده به—this terse construction is very frequent, cf. Hāfiz (I. 350. 2): دردم نهفته به, 'tis best to hide my woe, and Sa'dī, Gulistān, p. 24: خوابش برده به, 'tis best that sleep should overtake him.

بودن او غیر عار نیست—cf.

نیست شو نیست از خودی زیراک

بتر از هستیت جنایت نیست

(T. 139. 12^a).

Become nought, nought from selfhood, because
There is no crime worse than thy being.

۲ بر—برِ یار, originally a substantive meaning 'breast,' 'side,' is used with the izāfat as a preposition = beside, towards. It must be distinguished from the preposition بر = up, on, etc., which is prefixed to verbs.

۳ هر کاو الخ—Man proposes, but God disposes, therefore freewill is absence of self-will. See XI. ۸, note.

۵ مستعار, lit. 'used as a metaphor (استعاره),' مجاز = (profane) contrasted with حقیقی (divine). The subject understood is غیر این, i.e. all except love.

۶ معشوقِ مُرده را—the world, which Hāfiz (I. 80. 7, II. 232. 8) likens to a γυνή πολυάνωρ. In the second miṣrā' کِنار = (a) bosom, (b) limit.

۷ مدد—see VI. ۱۲, note.

۸ آن کُل که از بهار بُود الخ—the celestial Rose and Wine, unlike their counterfeits on earth, are wholly free from defect : which is Not-being.

۹ —نظاره‌گر —for the tashdīd see XXIII. ۵, note.

راه —درین —see I. ۴, note.

فی : هیچ مرگ بتر ز انتظار نیست —cf. the proverb : 'in delay are calamities.' Procrastination in love implies a lack of devotion, for as Sa'dī says (Gulistan, p. 21):

فرقت میان آن که یارش در بر

با آن که دو چشم انتظارش بر در

How blest is he who folds the loved one to his breast,
O'er him whose waiting eye still on the door doth rest!

The Sūfī must live in the present, regarding neither yesterday nor to-morrow, but absorbed in the 'eternal Now' of divine energy. Cf. Whinfield's Masnavī, p. 6, note on ابن الوقت.

۱۰ —بر نقد قلب زن الخ —a play on قلب, which means 'heart,' and also 'adulterated coin.'

۱۱ —گرت گوشوار نی —'if you are not a slave' i.e. of a base disposition. Among Orientals a ring in the ear is the badge of servitude (cf. حلقه بگوش = thrall). The phrase corresponds to اگر قلب نیستی in the preceding line.

۱۱ —بر اسپ تن الخ —this metaphor explains itself.

Let the soul refuse to be led astray by the senses, that she may soar up to God on the wings of love.

۱۲ اندیشها—not only worldly thoughts, but also intellectual apprehensions and all operations of the mind.

۱۳ چون ساده شد ز نقش الخ—when the soul has thoroughly purified and emptied herself of sensible forms and images, she will be transformed to the pure and simple light and there dwell in a state of perfection. This light is always ready to be communicated to the soul, but cannot pour in so long as she is masked and hampered with natural forms and veils (Juan de la Cruz). Cf.

روح چو از مهر کنارت گرفت

روح شود پیش تو جمله نقوش (T. 74. 9^a).

When the spirit lovingly embraces thee,
In thy presence all images become spirit.

ساده روی—one who has no hair on his face, effeminate. Cf. the use of 'glaber' in Latin (Catullus, LXI. 142, etc.).

۱۴ کورا ز راست گشوی الخ — Kor. xxxiii. 53 :
وَاللّٰهُ لَا يَسْتَحْيٰ مِنْ آ^ءِ
the truth.

۱۵ ز تمیز —i.e. by being cleaned. Cf.

آینهات دانی چرا غماز نی

زانکه زنگار از رخس مُمتاز نه

(Maṣnavī, 5. 8).

Dost thou know why from the mirror glancing rays are furnished not?

'Tis because the rusty surface, where they strike, is burnished not.

کورا غبار نه—but cf.

جان چو آئینه صافی است برو تن گردست

حُسن در ما ننماید چو بزیر گردیم

(T. 238. 11^a).

The soul resembles a clear mirror: the body is dust upon it;

Our beauty is invisible, since we are under the dust.

کین رازدار آمد الخ ۱۶ — the heart cannot reveal the bewildering rapture of divine knowledge, whereas the mirror is a tell-tale (غمّاز).

XIV.

This poem affords an example of the rhetorical artifice called جواب و سؤال, Question and Answer.

جوشی ۲ — i.e. with fervid love.

جَرَحَ ۵ — cf. the Arabic expression: جَرَحَ الشَّهَادَةَ he (the judge) invalidated the testimony (see Lane under جرح).

تردامن — like آلوده (cf. Jeremiah, ch. ii. 34). In T. 310. 6^a the word is used in its literal sense:

چشمِ عشاق ز چشمِ رخ تو تردامن

By the eye of thy countenance the eyes of lovers are fringed with tears.

ترازو عدلست — for the adjectival force cf. عدلند, the balance is just, and see Lane under عدل.

غرامت — the ordinary meaning is 'penalty,' 'forfeit,' but according to the Ghiyāṣu 'llughāt it sometimes = پشیمانی, 'shame,' 'contrition.' Thus بی غرامت may be translated 'having no cause for shame,' i.e. 'innocent.'

٨ قَیصر—the Arabicised form of Cæsar.

٩ آن ملامت—worldly censure, which is apt to produce backsliding. Cf. Hāfiz, II. 496. 6 :

I said, 'They blame my fond pursuit of thee;
Who ever loved and lived from slander free?'

١٠ ره سلامت—cf. the proverb (Freytag, Vol. I. p. 14): إِنَّ السَّلَامَةَ مِنْهَا (الْدُّنْيَا) تَرْكُ مَا فِيهَا, Salvation from the world is to renounce the things of the world. But the poet, be it remarked, does not value زهد except as a means (ره) of gaining the ultimate knowledge of God which only union can give. Cf.

زهد اندر کاشتن کوشیدنست
معرفت آن کشت را روئیدنست
(Maṣnavī, 541, 5).

Striving to sow is abstinence,
Making the seed grow is knowledge.

١١ آفت—see notes on III. ٣, V. ٧, X. ٨.

استقامت—Jurjānī (Kitābu 'tta'rīfāt, p. 19) gives three definitions of this word. The last is: 'continuance, the non-preference of any thing to God.' Here, I think, it signifies the permanent spiritual condition (مقام), which never 'deviates into sense,' opposed to the momentary state of exaltation (حال).

١٢ This beyt occurs in Hāfiz, II. 496. 3, where the first miṣrā' reads :

هرچند کآزمودم از وی نبود سودم

The proverb will be found in Freytag, Vol. II. p. 730.

XV.

The uncontracted rhyme, —انه است, where however the ه is elided in pronunciation, does not appear in any of the MSS. except V.

Lines ۱—۶ give an allegorical picture of the Temple of Love.

چغانه—the Burhānī Qāṭi describes this instrument as ‘a piece of wood resembling a weaver’s comb (مُشته), split at one end and adorned with bells.’

این صورتِ بت الخ ۲—indifference of religions is a cardinal Sūfī doctrine. All forms and objects of worship are regarded as ‘broken lights’ of the One Being: hence idolatry is essentially unification (Gulshani Rāz, 867), and the sincere idolater more praiseworthy than the orthodox hypocrite. Cf. the following quatrain (T. 365. 5):

در بُتکده تا خیال معشوقه ما
رفتن بطوافِ کعبه از عینِ خطا
گُر کعبه ازو بوی ندارد کُنش ا
با بوی وصالِ او کُنش کعبه ماست

While my loved phantom dwells in the pagoda’s bound,
’Twere mortal sin, should I the Ka’ba compass round.
The Ka’ba is but a church, if there his trace be lost;
The church my only Ka’ba, while he there is found.

که در کون ننگجد ~
لَا يَسْعُنِي أَرْضِي وَلَا سَمَائِي وَلَكِنْ يَسْعُنِي قَلْبُ عَبْدِي
المؤمن, My earth and heaven contain me not, but the heart of my believing servant contains me.

همه فعل و بهانست—i.e. these names are wholly metaphorical.

۴ این خانه طلسمست — because it protects a ‘hidden treasure’ (cf. the last beyt and see notes on IV. ۲, VIII. ۳). Prof. Bevan proposes to take the words in a different sense: ‘this house is under a charm’ and therefore dangerous to one who should imprudently violate its sanctity (see Ṭabarī, p. 829, Nöldeke, Geschichte der Sasaniden, p. 38). طَلِسم is probably the Greek τέλεσμα.

(T. مخمور ز بادهٔ شبانه — this may = مستِ شبانست 299. 8^a), or مخمور از شبِ گذشته, which I prefer.

۵ بیت و ترانست — love is expressed in music and song. The Magnavī opens with an invocation to the reed-flute (نای). Cf. Rousselot, Les Mystiques Espagnols, p. 298, note.

۸ بجانِ تو — as the value of an oath depends upon the dignity of its object, the Persians, who are born flatterers, swear by you or something of yours, e.g. بمَرگِ خودت, by thy father’s grave, بقبرِ پدرت, by thy death (the greatest possible calamity), etc.

۹ This couplet describes the dazzling effect of divine beauty.

۱۰ زُهره — see v. ۶, note.

۱۱ سرِ زلفِ تو — phenomena which veil God are likened to the tresses with which a coquette conceals her face. The poet means to say that, when the internal mirror is cleansed from ‘self,’ the illusion of plurality disappears.

۱۲ زنان دست پریدند — Kor. XII. 31: ‘and she (Zulaikhā) said (to Joseph), “Come forth to them.” And when they beheld him they marvelled at him and cut their hands and said, “God forbid! this is not a man, but an exalted angel.”’ By cutting their hands the women showed that they had lost their senses and were absorbed in the Beloved.

١٤ تاریک بُود الخ—cf. the story (Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 47) of the lover who came to his friend's house and sought admittance. 'Who is there?' 'Tis I.' 'Then begone.' After a year he returned and being asked the same question replied, 'Tis thou who art at the door,' whereupon his friend received him, saying, 'There is no room for two "I's" in one house.' See also XIII. ٩, note.

١٥ دوگانست—unity is incompatible with the existence of the fleshly nature (هوا).

١٦ در بیشه شیران رو—engage in the 'Greater Warfare' against the passions, each one of which is a شیر باطن or moral lion (Maṣnavī, 37. 4). Cf. Redhouse's Maṣnavī, p. 101 seq. Juan de la Cruz (p. 180) in his commentary on stanza xx. of the Cántico Espiritual, l. 2, 'Leones, ciervos, gamos saltadores,' explains 'leones' as 'the fierceness and violence of the irascible faculty,' and again (stanza xxxvi. last line, 'Entremos mas adentro en la espesura') he says (p. 207): 'Hence this thicket (espesura), which the soul desires to enter, may very properly be understood to mean the throng and multitude of troubles and tribulations, entrance into which is desired by the soul, because nothing delights and profits it more than suffering.' Some may prefer to take در بیشه شیران رو as meaning: Join the ranks of fearless lovers (cf. Maṣnavī, 37. 12: 'the true lion is he who conquers himself'), and this interpretation agrees better with آنجا in beyt ١٧.

١٧ پسِ در وهمِ تو الخ—you invest the dark wood of sensuality with imaginary terrors; it is not so formidable as you suppose. The love and mercy of God will enable you to overcome every danger.

Avert thy face from fancy, by the code
Of Love convicted, whether fancy's slave
Or foul idolater, of equal crime. (Jāmī.)

Cf. the verses (Maṣnavī, 6. 8; Redhouse, p. 6, l. 34 seq.) in which imagination is described as governing all human actions :

نیست و ش باشد خیال اندر جهان
تو جهانی بر خیالی بین روان
بر خیالی صلحشان و جنگشان
بر خیالی نامشان و ننگشان

XVI.

۳ The طبلِ باز is used to startle water-fowl, which, as they fly into the air, are attacked by a hawk (Bahāri 'Ajam). According to a gloss on the Maṣnavī, 'when the huntsman wishes to call his bird back, he beats a drum : the hawk, having an affection for the drum, returns speedily' (بهوای آن مُعاودت کُند).

۵ ترك كُفتن—to repulse. Cf. دفع كُفتن.

۶ مُژده ریحانم آرزوست—an allusion to Kor. LVI. 87-88 : 'and if he be of those who draw nigh unto God, he shall enjoy peace and bounty (ریحان) and a garden of pleasure.'

۷ آن نان و آب چرخ—the petty doles of Fortune, contrasted with divine beneficence.

نهنگ is the crocodile, or, generally, any large fish. For عُثْمَان see XII. ۱۰, note, and for what may be called the 'metrical' tashdīd, XXIII. ۵, note.

^ وا أَسْفَاهَا—Kor. XII. 84: 'and he (Jacob) turned from them and cried, "O how I grieve for Joseph!"' (يَا أَسْفَى عَلَى يُوسُفَ).

آوارشِي كوه الخ ۹—cf. Sa'dī, Gulistān, p. 62:

Since God was my sole occupation, I ran
To bare crags and moors undiscovered of man.

۱۰. This couplet probably refers to Shaikh Najmu'ddīn Kubrā (see his life in Jāmī's Nafahatu 'l Uns, pp. 480—487), who was murdered by the Moguls (كُفَّارِ تَتَارِ) in the year 618 A.H. 'At the moment of his martyrdom he had seized the forelock of an infidel, and after his death ten men could not release it from his grasp. Some say that in the following lines Maulānā Jalālu'ddīn Rūmī alludes to this event and his (spiritual) relationship to the Shaikh':

(۱) ما از ان محتشانيم كه ساغر كيرند

نه از آن مُفْلِسْتَان كه بُزِ لاغر كُيرند

(۲) بيكي دست مِي خَالِصِ ايمان نوشند

بيكي دستِ دِكْشِرِ پَرچِمِ كافر كُيرند

The ode from which these beyts are taken begins in T at p. 164. 6^a. They are not immediately connected: (۱) is 164. 6^a, and (۲) 165. 1. As we are chiefly concerned with (۲), I add to my translation the beyt (164. 12^a) which precedes it in T.

We are of the lords who lift the goblet,

Not of the beggars who grasp at a lean goat.

Make fast the door and give us wine, for the hour is come

When the sallow-cheeked receive crimson wine.

With one hand they quaff the pure wine of faith,

With the other they grasp the forelock of an infidel.

Thus (۲) corresponds exactly to the first miṣrāʿ of ۱۰۰. For پرچم کافر جامِ باده we have مِی خالصِ ایمان

(the dark tresses of the Beloved are called 'infidel' because they veil his unity) زُلفِ یار. The reference to Najmu'ddīn is confirmed by the fact that Sulaimān Khān, the Bābī, recited this couplet (یک دست جامِ باده الخ) at his execution. See Browne's Episode of the Bāb, Vol. II. p. 334.

رقصی—cf. Hāfiz, I. 470. 5 :

Come, let us under the sword go merrily dancing together ;

Fortunate he at the last whom thou, Beloved, hast slain !

|| شیرِ خدا —'Alī. It is noteworthy that our poet, notwithstanding his Sunnī prepossessions, should have left more than one eloquent ode to testify his admiration for the Shī'ite chief. The language of the following extract is quite similar to that habitually used by Sūfīs in praising Mohammed :

'Alī existed since the world assumed a form,

'Alī existed since the beginning of space and time.

'Twas for 'Alī's sake that Man was worshipped by the angels :

Man was like a qibla and 'Alī was the object of worship.

‘Alī was Adam and Seth and Job and Enoch
And Joseph and Jonah and Hūd.

(T. 174. 2, 4, 5.)

Cf. the poem (T. 6. 1 seq.) which is the exordium of the first Dīvān. ‘Alī’s bravery was never doubted, and he is therefore fitly joined with Rustam, the national hero of Persia. Both stand here as types of the divine perfection.

دستان—for the story of Zāl, see Shāhnāma, Vol. I. p. 131 seq. . This name was given to Zāl by the Sīmurgh, his legendary foster-nurse, who explains it (ib. p. 138):

I called thee Dastāni Zand

Because thy sire wrought with thee deceit (دستان) and guile.

۱۲ —در دستِ هر که هست الخ

این بهار و باغ بیرون عکسِ باغِ باطن است

يك قُراضه است این همه عالم و باطن هست گان

(T. 54. 10).

This outward spring and garden is the reflexion of the garden spiritual;

All this world is a filing, and the spiritual is the mine.

۱۳ —عقیقِ خُرد لرزان—i.e. earthly goods, Mammon. لرزان describes the sparkling lustre of the stone.

۱۴ —زین خلقِ پُر شکایت—is here a noun = complainant, but if we read

زین خلقِ پُر شکایتِ گُریانم و ملول

it becomes an adjective qualifying خلق. For the scansion, in this case, see XI. ۱۰, note.

زاري مستانم آرزوست —cf. notes on v. ۷, l. ۹.

۱۵ فرعون —Pharaoh is to Moses as خیال (imagination) to حقیقت (divine truth).

ظلم —suggesting ظلمت (darkness), and hence appropriately followed by نور in the second miṣrāʿ.

۱۶ یافت —the abbreviated form of یافته. As a rule, the past participle retains final ه except in some compounds. Cf. e.g. خواب آلود, خُداداد, پاک زاد.

۱۷ ز رشک عام —not 'because of vulgar envy' (as in the text), but 'because I am jealous of the crowd.' The sentiment is that of Horace: Q̄di profanum vulgus et arceo.

۱۸ دی شیخ با چراغ الخ —this anecdote of Diogenes the Cynic (الْكَلْبِي) is found in the Lives of the Philosophers by Diogenes Laertius, whose words are: λύχνον μεθ' ἡμέραν ἄψας περιήει λέγων "ἄνθρωπον ζητῶ" (ed. C. G. Cobet, p. 142). It is told at greater length in the Maṣnavī, p. 459. 15 seq.; Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 257. Mīrkhwānd (Rauzat-u'-ṣṣafā translated by Rehatsek, Vol. II. p. 279 seq.) gives a short notice of Diogenes and quotes a number of his sayings. The variant نامزاج means 'ill-tempered.'

که —often introduces a speech, without any preceding verb, such as گُفتن or پُرسیدن.

۱۹ خود کار من الخ —cf. VI. ۱۱.

۲۰ پنهان ز دیدها —as the past participle in Persian has both an active and a passive signification, دیده is the seeing eye as well as the object seen.

آن آشکارصنعت پنهان —cf. Maṣnavī, 118. 5:

کارکن در کارگاه باشد نهان
 تو برو در کارگاه بینش عیان
 کار چون بر کارکن پرده تنید
 خارج آن کار نتوانیش دید

The Worker is hidden in the work-shop;
 Enter the work-shop and behold him face to face.
 Since a veil is drawn over the Worker by his work,
 Apart from his work you cannot see him.

(The 'work-shop,' as the poet proceeds to explain, is عَدَم,
 Not-being, and 'enter the work-shop' = annihilate self.)

۲۱ قُلْ—perhaps an imitation of the Koranic قُلْ.

۲۲ من خود ربابِ عشقم—cf.

من چنکِ تو ام بر هر رِکِ من
 (T. 236. 3) تو زخمه زنی من تنتنم

I am thy lute, on every vein (chord) of mine
 'Thou strikest the quill, and I vibrate.

And the beautiful lines of the Silurist :

Thus doth God key disorder'd man,
 Which none else can,
 Tuning his breast to rise or fall;
 And by a sacred, needful art
 Like strings stretch every part,
 Making the whole most musical.

یای فاعِل is the ربابی in ی—عشقم ربابی است
 (ی of, the agent), not the یای وحدت. Translate: 'Love is my rebeck-player.' ربابی in this sense is found again

(T. 335. 3^a). See a description and drawing of the rabāb in Lane's Modern Egyptians, Vol. II. p. 70 seq.

عُثْمَان—the Caliph 'Othmān was famous for his personal beauty, and may therefore, like Joseph, represent symbolically the divine Beloved. 'Othmān's name occurs in 'the apostolical succession of saints and prophets' (Maṣnavī, 121. 11 seq.; Whinfield, p. 73 seq.). But why should it be used here in connexion with the rabāb? I can only suggest that نَغْمَةُ عُثْمَان may have been the name of a particular tune called, perhaps, after some contemporary musician.

من هُدْهْدَمِ الْخ ٢٥—see II. ٦, note.

XVII.

With this magnificent ode, which has been admirably rendered in English verse by Professor Falconer (Forbes's Persian Grammar, p. 159), the reader should compare two poems of Henry Vaughan, entitled 'The Search' and 'The Dwelling-place' (Vol. I. pp. 33 and 241 of the Muses' Library Edition). Unfortunately the text is not found in any of the MSS. which I have consulted except V; that given by Forbes (p. ٣٨) agrees with R.

من آن روز بودم الخ ١—referring to the pre-existence of the soul (cf. the ḥadīṣ: أَنَا نَبِيٌّ وَ آدَمُ بَيْنَ أَلْمَاءِ وَالطِّينِ, I was a prophet when Adam was water mingled with clay). In the beginning 'God was, and there was nought beside him.' The first thing created was the soul of man (أَوَّلُ مَا خَلَقَ اللَّهُ رُوحِي), which lived and moved and had its being in God: mankind were ψυχὰι καθαρὰι καὶ νοῦς συνημμένος τῇ ἀπάσῃ οὐσίᾳ, μέρη ὄντες τοῦ νοητοῦ, οὐκ ἀφωρισμένα οὐδ' ἀποτετμημένα, ἀλλ' ὄντες τοῦ ὅλου (Plotinus, quoted by Ritter and Preller, 6th Ed. p. 509). The Dīvān is full of passages affirming the soul's original purity, lamenting its fallen state in the world, and bidding it 'flow back to the burning fountain whence it came.' Cf. with this beyt:

پیش از آن کاند در جهان باغ و رز و انگور بود
از شراب لا یزالی جانِ ما مخمور بود
ما ببغدادِ ازل لافِ اَنَا اَلْحَق میزدیم
پیش از آن کاین دار و شیر و نکتهٔ منصور بود
پیش از آن کاین نقشِ دل بر آب و کُلِ معمار شد
در خراباتِ حقایق عیشِ ما معمور بود
(T. 185. 2^a).

Ere there was garden and vine and grape in the world,
Our soul was intoxicated with immortal wine.

In the Baghdād of eternity we proudly were proclaiming
• "I am God"

Before the tumult and mystery of Mansūr.

Ere this image of the spirit became a builder on water
and clay (the body),

Our life was founded in the tavern of celestial truths.

(For Mansūr Hallāj cf. vi. ۱۲, note, and see Herbelot's
Bibliothèque Orientale under Hallage, Ibn Khallikān,
Vol. i. p. 423, Jāmī's Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 168, 'Aṭṭār's Tadhkiratu 'l Auliya in Tholuck's Blüthensammlung, pp.
310—326. He was executed at Baghdād in 309 A.H.)

اسما — 'and He taught Adam the names of all things'
(Kor. ii. 29).

ز ما شد الخ ۲—i.e. Man was the final cause of creation. Cf. the ḥadīṣ: لَوْلَاكَ لَوْلَاكَ مَا خَلَقْتُ الْأَفْلَاقَ, But for thee, but for thee, I had not created the heavens.

كَانَ جَا مِنْ وَ مَا نَبُوْد—cf. Jāmī's Yūsuf ū Zulaikhā, p. 16:

In solitude, where Being signless dwelt,
And all the Universe still dormant lay Concealed in selflessness, One Being was Exempt from 'I'- and 'Thou'-ness, and apart
From all duality.

(Translated by Mr E. G. Browne.)

زُف—phenomena. See note on xv. ۱۱.

چلیبا—Arabic صليب.

بُتْخَانَه—a centre of Hindoo idol-worship.

دیر—a Magian fire-temple.

کوه قاف—according to popular belief, this mountain, which Oriental geographers have localised in Caucasus, is five hundred parasangs high, and encompasses the whole earth. It is the fabled haunt of the dīvs and perīs, as well as of the عنقا—or Sīmurgh, a mysterious bird, perhaps identical with Sindbād's Roc (رُخ), by which the Sūfīs (e.g. 'Aṭṭār in the Mantiqu 'ittair) often represent the unknown God. See Lane's Arabian Nights, Vol. III. p. 91, and Muṭarrizī's commentary on أَغْرَبَ مِنَ الْعَنْقَاءِ (Ḥarīrī, Vol. II. p. 678), the text of which, accompanied by a translation, will be found in Garcin de Tassy's Les Oiseaux et les Fleurs, p. 218 seq.

از ابن سینا حال ۹ —the pronominal suffix belongs to حال. Abū ‘Alī Ḥusain Ibn ‘Abdullāh Ibn Sīnā (Avicenna) was born near Bokhārā (370 A.H.), and soon became celebrated for his researches in science, medicine, and metaphysics. As the champion of free-thought against dogma, he gave great offence to the ‘ulamā, who accused him of blasphemy. He concluded an adventurous and somewhat Bohemian life, at the age of fifty-eight, in his patron’s gaol. Consult for further information Herbelot’s Bibliothèque Orientale under Sina, Ibn Khallikān, Vol. 1. p. 440, and the article ‘Avicenna’ in the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

قَاب قَوْسَيْنِ ۱۰ —‘then he (Gabriel) approached (the Prophet), and drew nigh, until he was at the distance of two bow-lengths, or nearer’ (Kor. LIII. 8–9). But the Sūfīs interpret the passage as signifying the approach of Mohammed himself to the divine presence.

مَنْ عَرَفَ نَفْسَهُ : cf. the ḥadīṣ: اندر دل خویشتن ۱۱ —cf. the ḥadīṣ: مَنْ عَرَفَ رَّبَّهُ, He who knows himself knows his Lord (and see xv. *۳, note). The idea, common to all mystics, of the immanence or indwelling of God in the soul, is by Jalāl-u’d-dīn and other Sūfī writers pushed forward unfalteringly to the inevitable conclusion :

دلا جُستیم سر تا سر ندیدم در تو جز دلبر
 مخوان ای دل مرا کافر اگر گویم تو خود اوئی
 ‘ (T. 331. 2^a).

O heart, we have searched from end to end: I saw in thee nought save the Beloved.
 Call me not infidel, O heart, if I say, ‘Thou thyself art He.’

آنانکه طلبگذارِ خُدائید خُدائید
 حاجت بطلب نیست شُمائید شُمائید
 چیزی که نکردید کُمر از بهر چه جوئید
 کس غیرِ شما نیست

(T. 188. 6^a).

Ye who in search of God, of God, pursue,
 Ye need not search, for God is you, is you!
 Why seek a something which was missing ne'er?
 Save you none is, but you are—where, O where?

۱۲ بجز شمس تبریز الخ —as subject and object, lover and Beloved, are really identical (cf. T. 331. 2^a, above), love itself cannot be predicated of any being except the
 One, symbolised here by Shamsi Tabrīz.

XVIII.

۱ —just as the existence of the phenomenal world is renewed every instant by a fresh influx from the fountain of Being, there is in the soul also a perpetual ebb and flow of divine grace. Cf.

پیمانه ایست این جان پیمانه این چه داند
 گز پاک میپذیرد در خاک میرساند
 در عشق بیقرارش پیمودنست کارش
 از عرش میستاند بر فرش میفشاند
 (T. 177. 8).

This soul is a measure: how should the measure know
 That it is receiving of spirit and conveying to dust?
 Its task is to measure in restless love,
 Taking from heaven above, scattering o'er earth below.

از خاک بروید سر ۲ — 'a new life is born.' So Hāfiz says, alluding to spiritual regeneration (I. 430. 3):

Authority for union with thee is given to any one
 Who under thy sword continually receives a new head, like the candle.

Cf.

زهی خورشید جان افزا که یک تابش چو شد پیدا
 هزاران جانِ انسانی بروید از گل تیره
 (T. 93. 12).

Welcome, soul-producing sun! When a single ray of thine hath appeared,
 Thousands of human souls shoot forth from black (barren) clay.

No doubt the poet had in his mind, if not before his eye,
 the sudden growth and blossoming of spring flowers:
 hence پائی is the natural antithesis to بروید.

This seems the most probable explanation of a rather enigmatical phrase. Other passages, however, suggest that the meaning may be: Why, for the sake of one poor life, lose Him, whose love has claimed so many victims that he cannot take a step without a severed head (cf. II. ۳) starting up at his feet?

جان داند و جان داند ۳ — perhaps a reminiscence of 'Omar Khayyām, Quatrain 401:

او داند او داند او داند او

Cf.

آن چیز که دارد او او داند و او داند
(T. 161. 2^a).

خانهٔ جان—i.e. خانه ه

Cf. کز رخت بپردازم—in order to become devoid of 'self.'

رختی که داشتیم بیغما بُرد عشق
از سود و از زیان و ز بازار فارغیم
(T. 146. 11).

Love carried off as plunder the chattels which we possessed ;

We are independent of profit and loss and market.

میگاهم—cf. v. ۶, and رها کن تا که چون ماهی گدازان غمش باشم

که تا چون مه نکاهم من ز مه زان پس نیفزایم
(T. 246. 1).

Let me, like the moon, melt away in anxious love of him ;

For until I wane like the moon, I cannot wax more than the moon thereafter.

(T reads بیفزایم ; if this be correct, we must also read بکاهم.)

افزوید—the grammars do not mention this anomalous form. Only two other examples are known to me, viz.

نیفزوید and نفرسوید, which occur as rhymes (T. 167. 1 seq.).

همان ارزد الخ ۶—here the poet would seem to have anticipated Walpole's maxim that every man has his price: he means to say that the worth of a man is higher in proportion to the excellence of his ideal. Cf. Eckhart (Deutsche Mystiker, Vol. II. p. 199): 'The words of Augustine, "Man is what he loves," are to be understood in this way. If he loves a stone, he is a stone; if he loves a man, he is a man; if he loves God—I dare not say more, for if I said that he would then be God, ye might stone me.' Freytag (Vol. III. p. 644) gives a proverb to the same effect: قَدْرُ الرَّجُلِ عَلَى قَدْرِ هِمَّتِهِ, the dignity of a man depends upon the height of his aspiration. The view of Jalālu'ddīn himself is plainly expressed in the following beyts:

بر هرچه همیلرزی میدان که همان ارزی
 زین روی دلِ عاشق از عرش فزون باشد
 (R. 64. 2).

Know that your value is equal to the object for which you are quivering with desire;

On this account the lover's heart is higher than the empyrean.

(Cf. the ḥadīṣ quoted by Whinfield on Gulshani Rāz, 214).

جَنَبِشِ هر ذره بِاصِلِ خُودِ است
 هر چه بُود مَیلِ کسی آن شُود
 جان و دل از جذبۀ مَیلِ و هَوَسِ
 هَمِصِفَتِ دَلِبر و جانان شُود
 (T. 184. 10).

The motion of every atom is toward its origin;

A man comes to be the thing on which he is bent.

By the attraction of fondness and yearning the soul and the heart

Assume the qualities of the Beloved and the soul of souls.

XIX.

This poem is a metaphorical description of the mystic's journey to and in God (see Gulshani Rāz, 288 seq.).

۱ یکی ماه — the Beloved.

۲ بر بود مرا — i.e. transported me out of 'self.' The first stage is فنا, return from phenomenal to Absolute Being.

۵ کشتی قالب — like کشتی وجودم (IX. ۹).

۶ In the second stage of his journey (بقا) the pilgrim abides in God and experiences with Him the differentiation of Unity into plurality.

ان بحر بزد موج — God revealed himself by successive emanations. For موج see IX. ۱۱, note.

خرد — Universal Reason, the first emanation.

آوازه در افکنند — proclaimed the majesty of its Maker.

۷ کفی کرد — He created phenomena. Cf. the passage, T. 354. 9^a seq., quoted on p. 225.

۸ هر پاره کف جسم الخ — outward form is an illusion which dissolves at the command of God.

۹ شمس الحق تبریز — see XVII. ۱۲, note. Vision and union are not to be grasped by intellectual effort. They are acts of grace.

XX.

مکش تو چو تیرش | — he who seeks God must not rely on his own exertions, but rather allow himself, wisely passive, to be swept along by the unseen current of divine energy in which all finite existences are flowing backwards to their original source. Cf.

جذبه شاخ ابرا از بیخ تا بالا
همچنانکه جذبه جانرا بر کشد بی نردبان
(T. 54. 1).

The bough's attraction drew the sap from root to summit,
Even as attraction draws the soul upward without a ladder.

که يك جذب حق به ز صد کوشش است نشانها چه باشد بر بی نشان
(T. 282. 9^a).

Since one impulse from God is better than a hundred efforts,
How should there be clues to Him who has no clue?

چو عنكبوت ز دوده لعاب اندیشه
دگر مباف که پوسیده بود و تار بود
چو تو نگوئی گفت تو گفت او باشد
چو تو نبافی بافنده کردگار بود
(T. 181. 4^a).

Weave no more with soot, like the spider, a web of care
Wherein both woof and warp are rotten.
While thou art silent, His speech is thy speech;
While thou weavest not, God is the weaver.

۵ چو مرغ کُمانت — quick as the flight of fancy.

یقین — truth known intuitively and not depending on logical demonstration.

۶ این و آن — phenomena, plurality.

۷ ز عشق کُل — see XI. ۱۲, note.

۸ که کُفت نیز نتابی — as it seems uncertain whether the construction نتابی کُفت is admissible, I now prefer to read نتانی, the shorter form of نتوانی.

آن فلان — cf. VI. ۸.

XXI.

۱ شیوه آموزد — surpasses in coquetry.

فریب چشمِ جادویت : ۱ — cf. Hāfiz, I. 218. 1 : بجادوئی and III. 376. 1 :

May thine eye, schooled in Babylonian magic,
Never, O Lord, forget its enchantments!

بردوزد — for the meaning 'shut' cf. Nizāmī, Iskandar-nāma, 55. 9 : کُشاده دل و دیده بر دوخته, and for the interpretation 'fascinate' cf. the use of چشم بند (Vullers, sub voc.). There may be an allusion to the practice of sorcerers, who deprive a man of sleep by making his effigy in wax که از مومِ خود خواب را دُوختند, Iskandar-nāma, 58. 18), sticking it while hot into his eye, and uttering a charm over it (Clarke's Sikandar-nāma, p. 46). Possibly, however, the literal sense of بر دوختن is 'pierce' (see e.g. a passage from the Anvārī Suhailī in Spiegel's Chresto- mathia Persica, p. 39, ll. 17—19), and the frequent comparison of glances to arrows supports this view.

باری —once, once for all. It modifies or restricts a statement (برایِ تَقْلِيلِ وَاِنْحِصَارِ), like بِهِمِ هَالِ الْقَصِّه, and بِهَرِ هَالِ.

نیامیزد—in Arabic prosody the long vowels و and ی, when they form the ridf, are treated as rhymes. Persian poets do not avail themselves of this liberty. The present examples are perhaps unique.

هَلَا رَو بر رسن بازی —the heart entangled in the Beloved's tresses typifies (1) Man bewildered and held captive by worldly illusions (see xv. ۱۱, note), and (2) as here, the lover spell-bound in contemplation of the mysterious beauty of God. For the simile of زُلف and رسن cf. T. 90. 5:

رسنِ زُلفِ تو گَر زَانِکِه درین دام اُفتد

صد دل و جان بزند دست بهر پیچ و شکن

If the rope of thy tress should fall into this snare (pit),
A hundred hearts and souls would clutch every loop and twist.

کجا پروانه تا سوزد —where is one who will devote his life for love's sake? Sa'di has a delightful version of this allegory (Būstān, p. 224 seq.).

زود —short for زود. Cf. بو for بُود in the phrase بو که.

چنبر شو—I have translated these words literally in order to preserve the play on چنبر and رسن, which occurs again (T. 70. 6^a, 340. 10^a). چنبر is (1) a ring or hoop such as acrobats use in performing their feats, (2) a ringlet

(چنبر زلفش, Hāfiz, III. 216. 2). چنبر شدن is equivalent to گرفتار شدن, i.e. to be made captive, and this, probably, is the meaning which the poet himself attached to the words, although he must have been conscious of their double ambiguity.

شکستن از چیزی — نشکبی از آتش ۶ = to bear patiently the want of anything, like the Arabic صَبَرَ عَنْ شَيْءٍ.

آب حیات — the Fountain of Life in the Land of Darkness. Nizāmī tells how Alexander, guided by the prophet Khizr, sought it in vain (Clarke's Sikandar-nāma, p. 798 seq. Cf. Semelet's Gulistān, p. 144).

XXII.

خواجه ۱ — Sanā'ī is also distinguished by the titles of and شیخ.

سنائی — Abū 'l Majd Majdūd ibn 'Ādam Sanā'ī, the first great poet of Sūfism, began his career at the court of Sultān Ibrāhīm, the Ghaznavite. Stung by the chance words of a half-witted buffoon, he abjured the society of princes and applied himself to solitary meditation. His chef-d'œuvre, the Ḥaḍīqatu 'l Ḥaqīqat (finished in 535 A.H.), which formed the model for the Manṭiqu 'ṭṭair of Farīd-u'ddīn 'Aṭṭār and the Maṣnavī, ran the gauntlet of theological censure until its orthodoxy was certified by a special decree. Sanā'ī died in 545 A.H. (see Ethé's Catalogue). The date 576 A.H., given by Daulat Shāh, is erroneous. Further details will be found in the Encyclopædia Britannica under 'Sanā'ī,' Ouseley's Notices of Persian Poets, p. 184, and Jāmī's Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 693.

• ۲—۳ گاه, آب, شانه, and دانه are metaphors of the perishable phenomenal element in Man.

جان و خرد ه —human soul and reason, regarded as the embodiment of their Universals (عقل and جانِ کُلّ), emanate directly from, and eventually are re-united with, Absolute Being. Observe the different scansion of سوي in each misrā'.

• ۶ صاف.. دردمی —the divine principle pervading 'this muddy vesture of decay.'

جانِ کُلّ —جانِ دُومرا که ندانند خلق ۷ (see note on عقلِ کُلّ, above), the Neo-platonic πνεῦμα as عقلِ کُلّ is λόγος, which may be ranked among the few items of popular ignorance that we have not yet parted with. Cf. Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 148, note 3.

• ۸ در سفر —in the upward progress of the soul from the * Many to the One. • مروزی و رازی —these are opposing types: spirit and flesh, Being and Not-being.

مَرُوءُ الشَّاهِجَان —so called to distinguish it from مَرُوءُ آلرود, was before the Moghul invasion a large and flourishing city in Khorāsān, peculiarly important because of its vicinity to the northern frontier. Rai (Rhages) is said to have rivalled Bāghdād in magnificence: its site near Teherān is now covered with ruins (see a résumé of its history in Brugsch's Reise nach Persien, Vol. i. p. 233).

Concerning the anomalous formation of مروزی and رازی cf. Wright's Arabic Grammar, Vol. i. p. 153 D, Ibn Khālikān, Vol. i. p. 7.*

The Maṣnavī (11. 18 seq.) offers a striking parallel to this passage :

مؤمنان را بُرد باشد عاقبت
 با مُناق مات اندر آخرت
 كَرچِه هر دو بر سَرِ يَك بازيند
 ليك باهم مرغزى و رازيند
 هر يَكى سويِ مقامِ خُود رُود
 هر يَكى بر وفقِ نامِ خُود رُود

Victory falls to the believers at last,
 The hypocrites have death in the next world.
 Although both parties are engaged in one game
 Yet, as regards one another, they are natives of Marv and Rai (i.e. far asunder).
 Each goes to his own place,
 Each fares according to his name.

The edition of the Maṣnavī (Bombay, 1863), which I have used throughout, agrees with B in reading مرغزى for مروزی. The word is correctly explained in the margin : مردم منسوب بشهر مرو. Doubtless it is a dialectical variety of the common form. Others (cf. the Burhāni Qāṭi under لاش and the Būstān, p. 345, l. 5 of the commentary) derive it from مرغز, the locality of which they are candid enough to leave in nubibus.

روم—رومى is a general term for the territories of the Byzantine Empire.

۹ خانه خُود الخ —cf. Shelley's

Dust to the dust: but the pure spirit shall flow .
 Back to the burning fountain whence it came. .

اطلس—old, outworn. The term is generally used of a garment, and it may be so here. But see below.

مُرد—plural of اَمَرْد. On consideration I prefer the variant بُرد, which enables us to give اطلس the meaning commonly attached to it in Persian, viz. satin. Translate: How should satin accompany (match) a garment of wool? If مُرد be retained, we must render اطلس by 'worn out apparel.' The translation 'an old man' is not, I think, justified.

چون نُقْطَ . ۱—cf. Nizāmī, Iskandar-nāma, p. 504, l. 15:

ز پرگارِ آن حلقه مدهوش ماند
در آن حلقه چون نقطه خاموش ماند

He was amazed at the compass of the circle (of nobles round the king);

In that circle he remained silent, like the (central) point.

'A silent (closed) mouth is compared to a point. Some explain this simile by the fact that a point is incapable of partition, or because beauties make their mouths small when they are not speaking. Khān Ārzū says: نُقْطَه means a cipher (صفر), and we know from arithmetic that, while the other figures have numerical value, a cipher is nought. Accordingly نُقْطَه‌گُویَا and خاموش are synonymous' (Commentary ad loc.).

Cf. also

نُقْطَهٗ دل بی عدد^۱ و گردش است
گُفْتِ زبان جز یک پرگار نیست
(T. 73. 2^a).

^۱ T. om. و contra metr.

The heart is the point (in the centre) without number or motion ;

Speech of the tongue is only the compass (circumference).

مَلِك — مَلِك is a possible reading.

XXIII.

صَفَّه — see Lane under صف, and for the jingle with صفا cf. I. ۳, note.

فنا گشت ه — passive of فنا کرد, which is a compound transitive verb. This usage may sometimes lead to misapprehension. E.g. in the lines of Sa'dī (Gulistān, p. 33) :

ناسزائی را چو بینی بختیار
عاقلان تسلیم کردند اختیار

Mr Platts, taking اختیار as the object of تسلیم کردند, translates :

If thou see an unworthy man fortunate
(Thou wilt also see that) the wise have resigned authority.

تسلیم, however, as the context shows, is the object of اختیار کردند, and the second miṣrā' should be rendered :

The wise (in such a case) adopt resignation.

نظاره — the tashdīd is written metri causā. Cf.

هر سوئی نظاره سر بر کرده از دیوارها (Jāmī) which Rückert (Grammatik, Poetik, und Rhetorik der Perser, p. 108) translates correctly :

Die überall, um zu schauen, das Haupt heben über die Mauern.

Pertsch's statement (ibid.), that 'nur das letzere' (نظاره) heisst das Zuschauen, das erstere (نظاره) dagegen die Zuschauer,' is not in accordance with the facts. Cf. قطاره (xxxvi. ۲, note).

جَزُ خُدا نَکَرَد —cf. XIX. ۳—۴. None have vision of God but he who can say with Mansūr, 'I am God' (vi. ۱۲, note).

۶ آن چِراغ —referring, probably, to the sun. Cf. Kor. xxv. 62.

چون این بهم رسید الخ —cf. Maṣnavī, 21. 1 :

There is no 'two,' unless you are a worshipper of form:
Before Him who is without form all becomes one.
When you regard form, you have two eyes;
Look on His light, which is single.
Necessarily the eye, when it falls on One,
Itself is one: 'two' is out of sight.
The light of the two eyes cannot be divided
When a man's eye is fixed upon His light.

√ In beyt ۶ the poet used a metaphor implying dualism. He now corrects himself by affirming that all apparent difference is the manifestation of divine unity.

بیانست و —translate rather: 'is mere explanation and error.' بیان is often opposed to عیان as inferential to intuitive knowledge.

بَرشِکِ نورِ رُخش —God was jealous of his hidden beauty and desired to display it (cf. iv. ۲, note).

these words introduce and give their name to the 93rd Sūra of the Kor'ān. They express here the revelation of God in the phenomenal world.

٨ — خَيَّاطِ روزگار الخ — cf.

از بقا گُردون قبائی بر قدِ يك تن ندوخت

خلعتی بس فاخر آمد عُمر عیشِ کوتهیست

(Jāmī).

Fortune never stitched on any one's stature a garment of permanence ;

Life is a very splendid robe : its fault is brevity.

چاك نكرد = قبا نكرد.

XXIV.

٢ — بَدَامِ ديو — the variant دوغ, meaning literally
'butter-milk,' is used, as appears from this passage, in the secondary sense of 'deception.' Cf. the phrase دوغ خورْدن = غَلَط خورْدن.

٤ — جَنان — plural of جَنَّة. Owing to the absence of vowel points in the MSS. we cannot determine whether جَنان or جَنان has greater authority here. جَنان, however, is a word seldom met with in Persian.

٦ — لَحْد — an oblong trench, where the corpse is deposited, in the side of a grave.

٧ — بَدَانَهُ انسان — cf.

دانه دل کاشته زیرِ چنین آب و گِلِی

تا بهارت نرسد او شجرِی می نشود

(T. 163. 12^a).

The seed of the spirit, sown beneath this water and clay
(the body),

Becomes not a tree until it reach Thy spring.

٨ چاه—Kor. XII. 15.

٩ در جَوّ لامکان—cf. I. ١٤ for a similar division of the MSS. between حَمّ and

XXV.

١٤ شبِ غریب—probably we should render: 'On the strange night...thou wilt escape.'

آشنا—lit. 'the Beloved's voice.' I have slightly modified the translation in order to bring out the contrast between غریب and آشنا. In the following misrā' مار and مور form one of those assonances, like شور و شر below, which are so pleasing to the Persian ear.

٥ خمارِ عشق—خمار for خَمّار (cf. IX. ١٩, note) would make the meaning plainer.

٦ بْثیرانند—'on allume.' The poet regards death as a spiritual resurrection.

٨ گِرِفْتِه دو گوشِ خود از بیم—cf. Kor. II. 18: 'they put their fingers in their ears because of the crashing thunder, for fear of death.'

نَفخهٔ صور—Kor. LXIX. 13.

٩ عَيْنِ ناظر و منظور—complete union involves the identification of subject and object (see notes on IV. ١١, XXIII. ٦; Gulshani Rāz, 123 seq., 139 seq.).

١٠ آن شر و شور—the bewildering variety of phenomena by which Being is manifested.

|| احولی — seeing double, dualism. Cf. Masnavi, 12. 14:

گفت استاد احولی را کاندرا
 رو برون آر از وثاق آن شیشه‌را
 چون درون خانه احوّل رفت زود
 شیشه پیش چشم او دو مینمود
 گفت احوّل زآن دو شیشه تا کدام
 پیش تو آرم بکن شرحی تمام
 فت استاد آن دو شیشه نیست رو
 احولی بگذار و افزون بین مشو
 گفت ای اُستا مرا طعنه مزین
 گفت اُستا زآن دو یکرا بر شکن
 چون یکی بشکست هر دو شد ز چشم
 مرد احوّل گردد از میلان و خشم

A master said to one who squinted, 'Come in,
 Go and fetch that bottle from its place.'

When the squint-eyed man made haste to enter the house,
 There seemed to be two bottles before his eye.

'Which of those two bottles,' said he,

'Shall I bring to you? Give me a clear explanation.'

'There are not two bottles,' replied the master, 'go,
 Cease to squint and do not see more than one.'

'O master,' he said, 'rebuke me not.'

Said the master, 'Break one of those two.'

When one was broken, both vanished from sight;

'Tis lust and anger that make a man see double.

چشمِ احول (1) = چشمِ بد and (2) the 'evil eye' (see Lane's Modern Egyptians, Vol. i. p. 315).

بصورتِ بشرم الخ ۱۲ —referring to the doctrine of حُلُول (Incarnation), and particularly to the incarnation of God in Christ. The Sūfīs distinguish between حُلُول and اتِّحَاد. Cf. Maṣnavī, 439. 2 :

این انا هو بود در سِرّ ای فضول
ز اتِّحادِ نور نر راهِ حُلُول

This 'I am He' was mystical, O babbler,
Expressing union with the Light not by way of incarnation.

عشق سخت غیور —it is high treason against the majesty of Love to suggest that He, who is a pure spirit, can ever dwell in a mortal body. Cf. Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 29, and the ḥadīṣ there quoted: "Verily Sa'd is a jealous man, and I am more jealous than he, and God is more jealous than I, and of His jealousy He prohibits 'all pollutions both outward and inward'" (Kor. vi. 152).

چه جای صورت ۱۳ —صورت in this line = the Platonic ἰδέα. How is it possible, asks the poet, for Man, wrapt up as he is in phenomenal attributes, to reflect even a glimpse of the divine archetype? Cf.

لَیْلَى وِ مَجْنُونِ عَجَبِ هَر دُو بِيَكِ پُوسْتِ دُرُونِ
آيْنَهُ هَر دُو تَوَثَّى لِيَكِ دُرُونِ نَمْدِي
(T. 279. 12^a).

A marvel! Lailā and Majnūn both under a single coverlet!
Thou art the mirror of both, but thou art muffled in felt.

تو—صدتو, fold, has in modern Persian become a preposition meaning 'inside.'

آینه جان—for the فِكْ اِضافت see Platts, Persian Grammar, Part I. § 29.

جستندی ۱۴—this and ندیدئی in the next misrā' belong to the Past Conditional (Platts, ibid. § 97). The Present Conditional, which is not mentioned by Platts, occurs several times in the Dīvān and forms the rhyme of a ghazal (T. 337. 12^a) beginning:

ره بنمودمی بتو گره همگی نه جانمی

دیده شدی نشانِ من گره نه که بی نشانمی

کنده—خندق Arabicised. When Sa'dī fell into the hands of the Franks, he was set to work in the fosse of Tripoli (در خندق طرابلس—Gulistān, p. 62).

یک کور—a beggar who has lost his sight. Kings and blind men, says Dumas, are born deceivers.

غسالخانه ۱۵—a compound noun, like غسالخانه, wash-house.

دهان بسته و غماز. Cf.

ز طنازی شگوفه لب گشاده است

بغمازی زبان بسته است سونن (T. 47. 9^a).

The blossom has opened its lips in pleasantry,
The lily has closed its mouth in coquetry.

غماز also means 'tell-tale' or, as an epithet of light, 'ray-scattering' (see XIII. ۱۰, note).

غیر اهل ۱۶—the uninitiated.

اهلِ جَمَلِه —these words bear a double sense: (1) all that is worthy, (2) all people.

راز شد ز من مستور —I, as an individual, am non-existent: God is the totality of Being, and therefore of Knowledge.

۱۷ مشرق —cf. XVI. ۲۰.

فُتُوحَات (pl. فُتُوح فتح) —كُوكِبُهُ فَتَح is employed by the Sūfīs to denote all kinds of extraordinary favours which God bestows upon the spiritual adept.

رَايَتِ مَنْصُور —alluding probably to Mansūr Ḥallāj (the title of Shāh or Sultān is often usurped by famous 'men of the Path'). Cf. مَنْصُورِ مَنْ = my soul (T. 57. 5) and بَادَةُ انْثُورِي (T. 112. 3), mystical wine, opp. to بَادَةُ مَنْصُورِي.

As regards رَايَت cf. Ibn Khallikān, Arabic text (Ed. De Slane), p. 357, l. 1 :

وَبَدَتْ رَايَةُ الْوَفَا بِيَدِ الْوُجُدِ وَ نَادَى أَهْلُ الْحَقَائِقِ جُولُوا

And the banner of fulfilment was displayed by the hand of ecstasy,

And the champions of Truth gave the signal to charge.

In the Maṣnavī (542. 16; Whinfield, p. 301) Jalālu'ddīn illustrates his doctrine of manifestation per contraria by the metaphor of two standards, a white and a black, which are set up in successive periods, e.g. Adam and Iblīs, Abraham and Nimrod, Moses and Pharaoh.

XXVI.

از کنارِ خویش ا —'self' refers here, not, as it commonly does, to Man's phenomenal individuality, the cheating mask which prevents him from seeing things as they are, but to the divine spark or spirit which dwells within him and cannot die. This is the true 'self.' Cf. xvii. ۱۱, note, and Kor. l. 15: We (God) are nearer to him than the jugular vein.

۲ باغِ عشق بودم —the preposition is more usually omitted with verbs of motion, as in xxii. ۹.

مهرِ او الخ —cf. xxxiii. ۲.

روان شد جویبار —i.e. I wept for joy. Cf. Hāfiz, i. 64: 3:

چندان گریستیم که هر کس که بر گُشت

در اشکِ ما چو دید روان گفت کین چه ج

۳ خندان —full-blown. Arabic poets employ كَ and تَبَسَّم in the same sense.

خارِ هستی —cf. xiii. ۸, note. هستی signifies here Contingent or Phenomenal Being.

ذو الْفَقَار —the famous sword given by Mohammed to 'Alī, here used figuratively = death, corruption.

شاهدِ خوش قد و = سرو) آن سروِ ما ه (قامت).

دست برهم زد —in ecstasy. The words may also be translated 'rustled its leaves' (see Vullers under دست and کف).

۷ این عددرا —referring to آتشیهای برهم in the last beyt.

شبین —from جُنَج.

پنج و چار—the five senses and the four elements.

صد هزاران سیب شیرین الخ ۸—plurality is a phantom (cf. xxiii. ۶, note). This illustration recurs in the Maṣnavī (21. 5):

گُر تو صد سیب و صد آبی بشمری

صد نماید يك شود چون بفشری

بی شمار حرفها ۹—never mind the parts: look at the whole. Cf.

بر اهل صورت شد سخن اجمالها تفصیلها

بر اهل معنی شد سخن تفصیلها اجمالها

(T. 116. 4^a).

With men of form the word is: Synthesis by analysis;
With men of spirit the word is: Analysis by synthesis.

این نطق در دل—the language of the heart is—silence.
See I. ۱۸, note.

—ساده رنگی

‘Life, like a dome of many-coloured glass,
Stains the white radiance of eternity.’

(Shelley).

The same thought is found in Schiller’s epigram, entitled “Licht und Farbe”:

Wohne, du ewiglich Eines, dort bei dem ewiglich Einen!
Farbe, du wechselnde, komm freundlich zum Menschen herab!

Cf. with this passage the following lines (T. 332. 10^a):

روح یکی دان و تن گشته عدد صد هزار

چو که بادامها در صفتِ روغنی

چند لغت در جهان جمله بمعنی یکی

آب یکی گشت چون خابثها بشکنی

جان بفرستد خبر جانب هر با نظر

چونکه بتوحید تو دل ز سخن برگینی

Deem the soul a unit and the body a hundred thousand numbers,

Even as almonds in the form of oil.

How many words are there in the world! Yet all are essentially one;

Water becomes one when you break the jars.

The soul sends intelligence to every person of insight

When by acknowledging Unity you pluck away your heart from speech.

(فَاعِلِ حَقِيقَى) — God is the only real agent — اصلِ کار

Cf. Whinfield's Maṣnavī, pp. 15, 78, 91, 242.

XXVII.

This poem is headed in T. : فِي صِفَةِ الْمُسَافِرَةِ.

چو قطره الخ — cf. VIII. °, note.

وَطَنِ خَوِش — the sea (of Absolute Being).

باز آمد — as a rain-drop.

مُصْطَفَى — see note on IX. °.

رفت جانبِ یثرب — on the occasion of his departure from Mecca, A.D. 622. یثرب is the older name for the city which obtained at this time the honourable designation of مَدِينَةُ النَّبِيِّ, or briefly, Medīna.

√ سَفَرِ گَزین در خویش—introrsum ascende. Cf. the ḥadīṣ: He who knows himself knows his Lord.

چو کانِ لعل الخ—for the idea that rubies are coloured by the sun cf. Hāfiz, i. 46. 8:

Thy curving lip reveals that rubies borrow
Their lustre from the world-enlightening orb.

‘When the ruby, coming white from the mine, is dipped in fresh blood (تازه قانلی جگره) and exposed to the sun, it turns red’ (Sūdī, Commentary, ad loc.).

پذیرا شو—lit. ‘become recipient of’ (see Platts, Persian Grammar, Part i. § 92).

⁸ ز خویشتن الخ—cf. xxvi. ۱, note.

خاک گشت معدنِ زر—the earthly nature is transmuted by self-annihilation into the pure spiritual essence, which is its real and everlasting self. Cf. iv. ۷.

XXVIII.

شبان—this is not an irregular plural, but is composed of شب + ان, the contracted form of the adverbial suffix, -انه. Cf. شبانه روز and شبانروز = νυχθήμερον.

خانه دل—although دل and جان are often used synonymously by mystical writers, it is convenient in translating to keep a separate word for each.

پر—because the soul is the mirror of God, in whom all images are contained.

شمع چِکَل—the radiant beauty of thy face illumines even Chigil in Turkistān, the home of beauty.

محرم ۴—literally, ‘one who enjoys free access to the حَرَم.’ Hāfiz calls the soul صَید حَرَم (I. 178. 2).

حِلّ + Arabic بـ — بِحِل. The text is uncertain here. Perhaps we should read بکن and take بِحِل کردن in its ordinary sense: to forgive. With مکن, it must mean: to make common property, to desecrate. Notice the word-play; حِلّ and حرم are opposites in Arabic.

سر زلف = سر رشته — داد سر رشته بمن الخ ه the tip of the Beloved’s curl, enwinding the amorous soul and leading it towards him (cf. XXI. ۴, note). Hāfiz says:

بی گفت و گوی زلف تو دل را همی کشد
با زلف دلکش تو کرا روی گفت و گوست
(I. 64. 5).

Thy curl is ever drawing the heart silently;
Who hath power to speak (quarrel) with thy heart-ravishing curl?

Cf. ib. I. 116. 4; I. 676. 3.

بکش تا بکشم — ‘respect the bond (IX. ۹, note): be faithful in love, and I will not fail.’ Cf. Hāfiz, I. 386. 2:

گرت هواست که معشوق نگسلد پیمان
نگاه دار سر رشته تا نگه دارد

If it is thy desire that the Beloved should not break the covenant,

Keep thy end of the thread that he may keep his end.

هم بکش و هم مگسل — see XX. ۱, note, and cf. Jāmī’s Bahāristān, p. ۱۰, ll. 16—21; Hāfiz, II. 450. 6.

۶ خَرَكِه جان —the Turkmāns are a people of tent-dwellers: hence the metaphor.

۷ تُرُشِ مصلحتِ —literally, 'I am harsh in a good cause, or affair.' The use of the izāfat is remarkable; it seems to be imitated from the Arabic construction in cases like مَحْمُودُ السَّيْرَةِ (Wright's Arabic Grammar, Vol. II. p. 221). For the poet's view of the probationary and corrective purpose of suffering—τῷ πάθει μάθος—cf. Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 90 seq., 114, 295.

۸ كِه منم —egoism, by asserting the reality of the phenomenal self, involves the denial of Unity. There is a proverb, مَنْ قَالَ أَنَا وَقَعَ فِي أَلْعَنَّا, Whoever says 'I' falls into trouble (Freytag, Vol. III. Part I. p. 424). Cf. xv. ۱۴, note, and Hāfiz, II. 258. 8:

بیا و هستی حافظ ز پیش او بردار

کِه با وجودِ تو کس نشنود ز من کِه منم

Come, lift the mask of my being from before me;
'Let none, while thou art, hear me say, 'I am.'

۹ صلاح دل و دین —see II. ۱۴, note.

صورتِ آن تُرک —a type or manifestation of divine beauty.

صورتِ دل —the soul is identified with God. Cf. note on XVII. ۱۱.

XXIX.

۱ لُطِفِ چو شکرِ —for the izāfat see VII. ۷, note.

تعال —'come' is perhaps an adequate rendering. Cf. Lane under علا.

إِرْجِعِي إِلَى رَبِّكَ رَاضِيَةً : Kor. LXXXIX. 28 : — إِرْجِعِي ٣
 مَرُضِيَّةً, (O soul), return to thy Lord, well-pleased and well-pleasing. Cf.

شَهْ مِنْ كُفْتِ اَيْنِ مَجْنُونِ بَجَزِ زَنْجِيرِ زُلْفِ مِنْ
 دِگَرِ بِنْدِي بِنِزِيرِدِ تُو خُوِيْ اَوِ نَمِيدَانِي
 هِزَارَانِ بِنْدِ بَرِ دَرْدِ بَسُوِيْ دَسْتِ مَا پَرْدِ
 اِلَيْنَا رَاجِعُونَ كَرْدَدِ كِه اَوِ بَازِيَسْتِ سُلْطَانِي
 (T. 343. 11^a).

Said my King: 'This Majnūn (the soul) will accept no gyve

But the chain of my tress; thou knowest not his nature.
 He will break a thousand gyves, he will fly to our hand,
 He will be "to us returning," for he is a royal falcon.'

طَبْل — see XVI. ٣, note. According to Kaempfer (Amoenitates Exoticae, p. 743 seq.) 'طَبْلِ بَاز', i.e. tympanum falconum, parvulum est, aeneum, in appendicem productum, reticuloque densissime munitum.' He adds that it is carried by kings and nobles on the left side of their saddles.

صُوفِي ٤ — this word has been erroneously connected with صُفَا, صُفّه, and σοφός. It is derived from صُوف, wool. Cf. the phrase, لَبَسَ الصُّوفَ, he donned the wool, i.e. devoted himself to a monastic or contemplative life, and see the article 'Sūfi' by T. Nöldeke, Z.D.M.G., Vol. XLVIII. p. 45.

جَانِ بَخْشِي ٥ — cf. Hāfiz, I. 184. 5 :

از رَوَانِ بَخْشِي عَيْسِي نَزَمِ پِيشِ تُو دَمِ
 زَانَكِه در رُوحِ فِزَائِي چُو لَبْتِ مَاهِرِ نِ

and Masnavi, 370. 13 :

کار من سربخشی و بیخویشی است
کار شاهنشاه ما سربخشی است

'Tis my business to yield up life unselfishly,
To bestow life is the business of our King of kings.

۶ قفس — cf.

مَرغِ باغِ مَلکوتِ نِیمِ از عَالَمِ خَاکِ
دو سه روزی قفسی ساخته اند از بدنم

(T. 256. 7).

I am a bird of the heavenly garden : I belong not to the earthly sphere ;

They have made, for two or three days, a cage of my body.

۷ پایِ ماچان, otherwise called صَفِ نِعال, and , is the lowest part of the room, beyond the carpet, where visitors remove their shoes on entering;
the least honourable place, where people of the humbler sort stand (Browne, J. R. A. S., 1895, p. 806). It is also a place of penance and humiliation. The darvīsh who has committed a fault must stand here on one foot, holding his left ear in his right hand, and his right ear in his left, until the Director (پیر) allows him to go. صَدْرُ الْجَلَالِ is contrasted with صَفِ النَّعَالِ in a passage from the Kitābi
Aqdas of Bahā 'ullāh (ib. p. 808).

۱۰ زِ کُودکِی الخ. — cf. I Corinthians, ch. xiii. 11 :
'When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child, but when I became a man,

I put away childish things.' Commenting on this text Juan de la Cruz remarks (Subida del Monte Carmelo, p. 41): Objects of sense and the knowledge derived from them are the occupation of a child; and therefore, if the soul will attach itself to these and refuse to forsake them, it will never cease to be a little child, and it will always speak and think of God, as a child does, because, fixing its attention on the outward sensible husk, which is the child, it will never reach the spiritual essence, which is the perfect man. See also Law, The Spirit of Love, p. 140 (quoted in Characters and Characteristics of William Law by Alex. Whyte, D.D., p. 127).

جوال — جوالرا بشکاف ۱۱, a sack, is used metaphorically to denote the human body.

بدستِ راست ۱۲ — on the day of judgement the righteous will receive the book, wherein their actions are recorded, in their right hand. Cf. Kor. xvii. 73; LXIX. 19—26; LXXXIV. 7—12.

Cf. — این نامه

کتابِ حسِ بدستِ چپ کتابِ عقلِ دستِ راست

تو نامه بچپ دادند بیرون ز آستانستی

(T. 59. 8^a).

In thy left hand the book of sense, the book of reason in thy right;

Had the scroll been put into thy left, thou wouldst be outside the threshold.

تو بستان نامه از چپ بدستِ راستم در نه

تو تانی کرد چپرا راست بنده ناتوانستی

(T. 59. 12^a).

Do thou take the scroll from my left hand and lay it in my right;
 Thou canst make the left right: thy servant would not be able.

۱۳ خردرا—human reason (see IV. ۱۰., note).

۱۴ Observe the jingles: روان, spirit, روان, moving;
 گنج and نالیدن; نال, from Arabic نال, and منال from رنج.

XXX.

قَلْبُ الْمُؤْمِنِ—alluding to the ḥadīṣ: ۲
 بَيْنَ الْإِصْبَعَيْنِ مِنْ أَصَابِعِ الرَّحْمَنِ يَقْلِبُهُ حَيْثُ يَشَاءُ, the heart of the believer is between the two (first and second) fingers of the Merciful; .He turneth it wheresoever He pleaseth. Cf. Whinfield's Masnavī, p. 242 seq.

۶ در ان خُمی الخ—the world resembles a dyeingvat in which the soul is coloured (i.e. blackened by association with Not-being). Cf.

بیرنگ فرو رستم در عشقِ تو ای دلبر

بر کش تو ازین خُم تا رنگِ دیگر گیرم

(T. 250. 3^a).

Without hue I descended in desire of thee, O Beloved;
 Draw me forth from this vat that I may take another hue.

For رنگ see xxvi. ۹, note.

۸ The mystic is alternately rapt to the shining heights of vision and plunged in the dark abyss of separation:
 these opposite states, resulting from the conflict of Being and Not-being, are to him what faith and infidelity are to common men.. Cf. Sa'dī, Gulistān, Book II. Story 9.

ز جیب و آستینم ۹ —the bosom of the shirt serves as a pocket, and loose money is often carried in the sleeve.

XXXI.

'The purpose of negation of self is to clear the way for the apprehension of the fact that there is no existence but the One' (Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 284). 'I am nought' means 'God is all.' Cf. Vaughan, Hours with the Mystics, Vol. I. p. 95. To this poem, one of the most splendid and sublime productions of his genius, Jalāl'uddīn has written a counterpart, scarcely less astonishing, the burden of which is echoed in Emerson's lines:

I am owner of the sphere,
Of the seven stars and the solar year,
Of Caesar's hand and Plato's brain,
Of Lord Christ's heart and Shakespeare's strain.

(See a version in English: Dabistān, Vol. I. p. clxvi and in German: Von Hammer, Schöne Redekünste Persiens, p. 191. The original text does not occur in any of the editions or MSS. used by me.)

ا کُبر —a Magian.

نه از خاکم الخ ۳ —cf. VIII. ۴, note.

بُلغار ۴ —for 'Bulgaria' in the translation read 'Bulghār.' This town was situated on the Volga, about 100 miles south of Kazan (see Géographie d'Aboulfēda by Reinaud and Guyard, Vol. II. Part I. p. 324 seq.; Muradja D'Ohsson, Des Peuples du Caucase, p. 73).

—there were two cities of this name, one on the borders of China, and the other, evidently referred to here, in the land of the Khazars, who occupied a vast and ill-defined territory, extending at different periods from the Crimea to the Caspian Sea (D'Ohsson, Des Peuples du Caucase, p. 190 seq.; Géographie d'Aboulféda, Vol. II. Part I. p. 286, and note 2; Qazvīnī, Kosmographie, ed. Wüstenfeld, Part II. p. 402).

عِرَاقِ عَرَبِيّ and عِرَاقِ عَجَمِيّ —the two 'Irāqs, عِرَاقِينَ. The former, also called Jibāl and Kūhistān, is the great central province of western Persia, and is bounded on the east by Khorāsān, on the north by Māzanderān, Ghilān, and Ādharbaijān, on the west by Ardilān and Lūristān, on the south by Khūzistān and Fārsistān. 'Irāqi 'Arabī lies between the Tigris and the Euphrates, and stretches westward to the borders of the Syrian desert.

فِرْدَوْس ۵ —Greek παράδεισος (but see Lane under فردس).

رِضْوَان —the angel who has the keys of Paradise.

مَنْ از جَانِ جَانَانِم ۶ —when every trace of finite existence is swept away, the Infinite remains.

يَا هُو ۸ —'O He' (Jahve, Jehovah), one of the most familiar darvīsh-cries.

يَا مَنْ هُو —'O He who is.'

رِنْدِي و قِلَاشِي ۹ —spiritual rapture and ecstasy.

اَكْثَرِ دَر عُمَرِ خُودِ الْخ ۱۰ —cf.

كُتُرِ بَرَأَرَنْدِ يَكِ نَفْسِ بِي دُوسْت

دَلَقِ و تَسْبِيحِ شَانِ شُودِ زُنَّارِ (T. 26. 7).

If they pass one moment apart from the Beloved,
Their mantle and rosary become a Christian girdle;
(they are guilty of infidelity).

اگر دست دهد مرا — i.e. اگر دستم دهد الخ ۱۱
دست دادن = to come to hand, to accrue. The subject is دمی.

همی — here in its original meaning = همیشه. For the sentiment cf. Hāfiz, i. 710. 4.

۱۲ نباشد هیچ دستانم — this may be translated: 'I have no device.'

XXXII.

۲ آتش تو — the celestial fire of love.

بو لهب — 'Abdu 'l Uzzā, surnamed Abū Lahab (father of flame), was the uncle and bitter enemy of Mohammed, who denounced him as follows: 'The hands of Abū Lahab shall perish and he shall perish. Neither his wealth shall profit him, nor what he hath gained. He shall enter into the flaming fire' (نَارًا ذَاتَ لَهَبٍ). See Kor. cxi. with Sale's notes.

۳ دریچه دل — cf.

دوری ز تن لیک از دلم در پیش رویت روزنست

ز آن روزن دزدیده همچون مه پیامت میکنم

(T. 261. 12).

From the body thou art far, but in my heart, fronting thy face, is a window;
Thro' that secret window, like the moon, I am sending thee a message.

‘The soul resembles this window, in which is ever being reflected, or rather is dwelling, the divine light of the all-pervading presence of God’ (Juan de la Cruz, Subida del Monte Carmelo, p. 23).

For the exact signification of دریچه see Gulistan, translated by Platts, p. 7, note.

نثار — v. ۱, note.

ای نورِ هر — a term of endearment. So ای دو دیده ۵ (Hāfiz, II. 502. 1 ; 512. 7).

عجم — properly, all who are not Arabs, then specially, the Persians. Cf. the double sense of Bápbapos.

باده — see Gulshani Rāz, 805 seq.

ای مادر و پدر تو ۷ — cf.

چون پدر و مادر عقلست و روح

هر دو توئی چون شوم اندر تو عاق

(T. 224. 8).

Reason and Soul are as father and mother ;

Thou art both : how should I be disobedient towards thee ?

در خود طلب ندیدم ۹ — see xvii. ۱۲, note, and cf.

خود است جمله طالب و ما همچو سایه

این گفتگوی ما همگی گفتگوی دوست

(T. 137. 3).

We are even as shadows, He is all who seek,
Lo, by Him is spoken every word we speak !

عاشقانرا جستجو از خویش ن

در جهان جوینده جز او بیش ن

(T. 150. 4^a).

۱۰ فضل و ادب رها کن — VIII. ۷, note.

بخواندی — read — تا تو ادب نخواندی: 'Since thou hast taught me culture, I know no culture but thee.' For this meaning of خواندن cf.

بخواندهای مَعْلَمِ تمام بگذاشتم

مَعْلَمِ آنچه نخواندست من ز بر دارم

Tho' all my teacher's lessons are forgot,
I have by heart whate'er he left untaught.

خواندن, like قَرَأَ in Arabic, is originally 'to read with a musical intonation,' 'to chant.' Ben Jonson supplies an interesting parallel in The Fox, Act II. Scene 1:

that vulgar grammar,
Which he that cried Italian to me, taught me.

جز تو ادب ندیدم — Shakespeare, Sonnet LXXVIII:

But thou art all my art, and dost advance
As high as learning my rude ignorance.

XXXIII.

۲ بکه چشم باز دارم — these words may also mean: 'in whom shall I have hope again?'

منم ان که الخ — translate: 'Am I one whose heart...?' i.e. 'I am not one whose love admits of cure,' Cf.

خدای پهلوی هر درد داروئی داده
 ۱ چو درد عشق قدیمست ماند بی ز دوا

(T. 9. 13).

God hath given a physic for every pain ;

Since the pain of love is old (eternal), for it no remedy hath been found.

XXXIV.

۱ صورتگر نقاشم —the human mind, by the necessity of its nature, cannot form any idea whatsoever except through the medium of symbols, images, and impressions. All these, whether sensual or spiritual, partake of Not-being, and therefore veil and obstruct the divine light. See on this subject Juan de la Cruz, Subida del Monte Carmelo, Bk. II. Ch. 12.

هر لحظه بتی سازم —as regards the educative value of 'forms' cf. Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 76, p. 270. 'Beholding in many souls the traits of the divine beauty, and separating in each soul that which is divine from the taint which it has contracted in the world, the lover ascends to the highest beauty, to the love and knowledge of the Divinity by steps on this ladder of created souls' (Emerson).

۲ چون نقش ترا بینم الخ —the divine idea effaces all others and fills the soul. Cf. XIII. ۱۳, note.

۳ In what terms can I describe thee? As the spirit of love, or the foe of reason, or the destroyer of earthly imaginations?

۴ چون بوی تو دارد جان —cf. XVIII. ۳.

۵ هر خون که ز من روید — every drop of my blood, that thou sheddest (cf. دلبرِ خون خواره را, III. ۳), as it sinks into the earth proclaims its union with thee.

با مهر تو همرنگم — Unity is called a sea of blood (Gulshani Rāz, 499) 'because of the continual annihilation in it of its waves, viz. phenomena and plurality.'

۶ خانه آب و گل — the body.

XXXV.

۱ صد پرده الخ — see IX. ۱۴, note.

۲ از نفس گسستن ... از قدم بُردن — to renounce self (فنا) and to travel abidingly in God (بقا), which are the beginning and end of the mystical journey (see notes on XIX. ۲ and ۶; Gulshani Rāz, 307 seq.). In the Bahāristān (p. ۱۰, l. 16 seq.) faith is defined as کندن و پیوستن, i.e. 'to sever the heart from created things and unite it with God.'

۳ نادیده گرفتن این جهانرا — cf.

تو مبین جهان ز بیرون که جهان درون دیده است
چو دو دیده را ببستی ز جهان جهان نماند
(T. 164. 3^a).

Look not on the world from outside, for the world is within the eye;

When you shut your eyes to the world, the world remains not.

مر دیده خویشرا ندیدن — this misrā 'allows of another interpretation, viz. 'not to see your own eye,' whence all objects derive their unreal existence.

د — در کوچه سینه دودن — 'introrsum ascendere.'
کوچه is the diminutive of ۶ — ز گجاست این طپیدن — cf.

مُرعِ دلمِ میطپید هیچ سکونی نداشت

مسکنِ اصلیش دید یافت درو ساکنی

(T. 340. 3^a).

Returning to its ancient nest

My restless fluttering soul had rest.

۷ — ای مُرعِ — x. ۷, note.

بگو زبانِ مُرغان — use the language of mystics, speak in parables. For the allusion to Solomon see II. ۶, note.

۸ — بکارخانه بودم — in the presence of, and not yet separated from, the divine artificer. Cf. note on XVII. ۱.

تا خانه آب و گل پزیدن — see XXXIV. ۶, note. According to an ḥadīṣ, 'He kneaded the clay of Adam forty days.'

۹ — خانه صنع — the phenomenal world.

۱۰ — می کشیدند — because the soul was reluctant to enter the world, and hated the body in which it was doomed to captivity.

چون گویم — this simile may have been suggested by the words بی پای مانند : the epithet بی پای, footless, is frequently applied to a ball. The personal suffix belongs to صورتی کشیدن. As regards the scansion of this misrā' see XI. ۱۰, note.

XXXVI.

۱ کوچ کردن—to decamp, to migrate.

۲ قطارها—the tashdīd is required by the metre. See notes on IX. ۱۹, XXIII. ۵.

حلالی خواستن از کسی—از ما حلالی خواسته means: asking a person to make such and such a thing lawful to the asker, i.e., according to the context, either to give him permission to act in a certain manner, or to release him from all obligations which he may have incurred with respect to the person addressed. Here the camel-driver begs to be excused for having disturbed the travellers' repose.

Prof. Bevan suggests that جلال (جَلّ pl. جلال), which is found in one of the MSS., may be the correct reading. In this case we must imagine the saddle-cloths to have served as blankets; at dawn the sārībān comes to reclaim his property.

Cf. چه خفته اید ای کاروان

چرا ز قافله يك كس نمیشود بیدار
 كه رختِ عُمرِ زكى باز میبرد طرار
 چرا ز خواب و ز طرار می نیازی
 چرا از آنكه خبر میدهد كشی آزار
 ترا هر آنكه بیازرد شیخ و واعظ
 كه نیست مهر جهانرا چو نقش آب قرار
 (T. 26. 12).

Why is no one in the caravan awake,
 When the cutpurse is bearing away the baggage of pure life?

Why art thou not troubled by sleep and the cutpurse,
 Why art thou aggrieved by him who gives thee warning?
 He who troubles thee is thy shaikh and monitor,
 Saying, 'The world's dowry, like a reflection in water,
 has no permanence.'

(Probably مهر جهان, the worldly sun or the love of the world, is a better reading, on account of نقش آب.)

۴ — شمعهای سرنئون — Cf. Shakespeare, Sonnet xxi. :
 'those gold candles fixed in heaven's air.'

— خلقى

And yet as angels in some brighter dreams
 Call to the soul when man doth sleep,
 So some strange thoughts transcend our wonted themes

And into glory peep. (Henry Vaughan.)

عجب — adjectival, as in the phrase, عجب حالىست.

(T. 62.) تا چند آب ریزد دولاب آسمان — چرخ دولابی ۵

12^a). هفت آسمان = هفت دولاب (Lakh. 29. 1).

آمد گران خوابی ترا — 'our birth is but a sleep and a forgetting.' The same idea is developed in a passage of singular beauty (Maṣnavī, 385. 22; Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 217):

گرچه خفته گشت و ناسی شد ز پیش

کی گذارندش در آن نسیان خویش

باز از آن خوابش^۱ بیداری کشند

که کند بر حالت خود ریشخند

^۱ The text has بپنداری.

که چه غم بود آنکه میخوردم بخواب
 چون فراموشم شد احوالِ صواب
 چون ندانستم که آن غم و اعتلال
 فعلِ خوابست و فریبت و خیال
 چنین دنیا که حلیم نایم است
 پندارد که این خود قائم است
 تا بر آید ناگهان صبح اجل
 و ا رهد از ظلمتِ ظنّ و دغل

For the repetition of ترا to complete the rhyme, cf. vi. ۴.

۶ ای پاسبان — Shakespeare, Sonnet LXI. :

It is my love that keeps mine eye awake,
 Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
 To play the watchman ever for thy sake.

خفته نشاید — Cf. the analogous construction of به with a participle, XIII. ۱, note.

۷ جهانِ حامله الخ — this world is passing away and in its death-throes will bring forth the world without end.

۸ تو گِل بُدی و دل شدی — Cf. XII. ۱—۱۰; Paradise Lost, Bk. v. 479 seq.

۹ اندر کشاکشهای او الخ — in the sweet anguish of love, which 'carries a Man out from himself, as insufficient to be his own Good, towards Good without him' (Norris, Theory and Regulation of Love, p. 18).

۱۰. توبه شکستن —by repentance the poet means rehunciation of love.

اگر زمین بسراسر بروید از توبه
بیک دم آن همه را عشق بدرود چو گشیا
(T. 9. 11).

If the whole world should burgeon with repentance,
Love in a moment will reap it all like grass.

Cf. 'Omar's rebuke to the Harper (Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 34).

این ذرها لرزان دلان — Gulshani Rāz, 165 :

Each atom doth invisibly enshrine
The deep-veil'd beauty of the Soul divine.

۱۱ ریشخند — ای ریشخند رخنه چه is (1) laughing-stock, (2) mocker. In my translation I have given it the former sense, but the second is equally appropriate. Cf. ۱۲ افسوسها میداشتی below. رخنه چه seems to be an ἀπαξ λεγόμενον.

ده — سالار ده is the old Persian dahyāušh (land, province). Like شهر, it has lost in men's mouths even the memory of its birthright.

۱۳ دیشی — your soul, which should reflect the truth, is obscured by pride and self-will. Cf. Maṣnavī, 176. 9 :

زَنَكِ تو بر توت ای دِيَكِ سِيَاه
 كَرْد سِيَمَايِ درونت را تَبَاه

Thy rust, coat on coat, O black kettle,
 Has corrupted thy interior aspect.

۱۴ —cf. Hāfiz, I. 276. 3: در من کسی دیگر بُود

در اندرونِ منِ خسته دل ندانم کیست
 که من خموشم و او در فغان و در غوغاست

۱۵ —the quietist is at peace with all men. Cf. XI. ۸, note.

۱۶ —Man is the meeting-point of two worlds: on one side the baser elements of his nature attach him to the shows and apparitions of mortality, but in virtue of his 'divine spark' he passes beyond them into the spiritual universe, and knocks at the door of Being.

۱۷ —whose love is too deep for utterance. Cf. I. ۱۸, note.

XXXVII.

۲ —cf. IX. ۲۰, note. God is foreign to the world, yet never absent from it, i.e. He at once transcends and pervades all phenomenal existence. Cf. Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 183, l. 2.

۳ —دُرْدیده —the participle is used adverbially.

۶ —سِپَر می‌گنی —'why defend your constancy by words,

١٠. توبه شکستن —by repentance the poet means rehunciation of love.

اگر زمین بسراسر بروید از توبه
 بیک دم آن همه را عشق بدرود چو گُیا
 (T. 9. 11).

If the whole world should burgeon with repentance,
 Love in a moment will reap it all like grass.

Cf. 'Omar's rebuke to the Harper (Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 34).

این ذرها لرزان دِلان — Gulshani Rāz, 165 :

Each atom doth invisibly enshrine
 The deep-veil'd beauty of the Soul divine.

|| ریشخند — ای ریشخندِ رخنه چه || is (1) laughing-stock, (2) mocker. In my translation I have given it the former sense, but the second is equally appropriate. Cf. below. افسوسها میداشتی رخنه چه seems to be an ἀπαξ λεγόμενον.

ده — سالارِ ده is the old Persian dahyāuš (land, province). Like شهر, it has lost in men's mouths even the memory of its birthright.

١٣. دینگی — your soul, which should reflect the truth, is obscured by pride and self-will. Cf. Maṣnavī, 176. 9 :

زَنَكِ تو بر توت ای دِيكِ سِيَاه
 كَرْد سِيَاهِي درونت را تَبَاه

Thy rust, coat on coat, O black kettle,
 Has corrupted thy interior aspect.

۱۴ در اندرونِ منِ خسته دل ندانم کیست —cf. Hāfiz, I. 276. 3:

كِه من خَمُوشِرو او در فُغان و در غُوغاست
 در اندرونِ منِ خسته دل ندانم کیست

۱۵ خَوشِمر چون کُلِستان —the quietist is at peace with all men. Cf. XI. ۸, note.

۱۶ این سو جهان آن سو جهان الخ —Man is the meeting-point of two worlds: on one side the baser elements of his nature attach him to the shows and apparitions of mortality, but in virtue of his 'divine spark' he passes beyond them into the spiritual universe, and knocks at the door of Being.

۱۷ كُو ناطِقِ اُخْرَس بُود —whose love is too deep for utterance. Cf. I. ۱۸, note.

XXXVII.

۲ تو در جهان غریبی الخ —cf. IX. ۴۰, note. God is foreign to the world, yet never absent from it, i.e. He at once transcends and pervades all phenomenal existence.
 Cf. Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 183, l. 2.

۳ دزدیده —the participle is used adverbially.

۶ سِهَر میکنی —'why defend your constancy by words, when, you break it in deed?' But I am inclined to believe that سپَر کردن here = سپَردن, trample under foot.

√ پایگاه—synonymous with صِفِّ نِعال (xxix. v, note).

از وجود—from the state of manifestation to that of occultation.

کوره ۱۰—this reading, which involves a very slight change, is due to Prof. Bevan. کوره, being comparatively a rare word, would readily become کوزه: we may disregard the evidence of MSS. in such cases, where the ductus litterarum is identical, and the pointing rests, as is likely, on the caprice or hasty conjecture of the scribe.

چو زر—yellow (زرد) is the hue of paleness in the East, as in Italy. Cf. saxum quoque palluit auro (Ovid, Metamorphoses, xi. 110), luridus, lūteus pallor, etc.

عقیله عِشاق ۱۳—I have erred in my translation of this line. عقیله seems to admit two meanings in Persian, (1) = شریف و نفیس, excellent and choice (Sūdī on Hāfiz, iii. 28. 2) and (2), like عقال, پابند, shackle, tether, according to a marginal gloss on Masnavī, 60. 10:

چون که عقل تو عقیله مردم است

آن نه عقل است آن که مار و کژدم است

Since thy reason is the fetter of mankind,

'Tis a snake and a scorpion, but not reason.

Cf. بگذر از لای عقل و فضل که هست

عقل اینجا عقیله فضل فُضول (Jāmī).

Cease to boast of your reason and learning :
Here reason is a shackle, and learning a folly. :

اَشْتَرِ دِيَوَانَهُ سَرْمَسْتِ مِنْ
سِلْسِلَهُ عَقْلِ دَرِيدَنْ كُشْرِفَتْ (T. 140. 4).

My frenzied intoxicated camel (the soul)
Began to rend reason's tether.

It appears from these passages that the correct translation of the first miṣrā' in the text is :

Since thou canst not endure a shackle for lovers,
i.e. if thou desirest that none who seek union with thee shall be hindered and trammelled in their search, why then dost thou make Reason no better than a blind guide?

۱۵ سزای دُزدِ بَصَرِ میثُنی — viz. by withdrawing the light of thy countenance.

۱۶ در بی سَرِی عشق — 'headlessness,' in mystical language, is equivalent to self-annihilation, utter absorption in the divinity. Cf.

بَرِ مَنْ نِیْسَتْ مَنْ وَ مَا عَدَمَ بَی سَرِ وَ بَی پا
سَرِ وَ دَل زِ آن بِنِهَادَمْ کِه سَرِ از یارِ بَرِ آرم
(T. 265. 2^a).

In me is no 'I' and 'We' (personality), I am Nought, without head and without feet;
I have sacrificed head and soul to gain the Beloved.

(Cf. the phrase, سَرِ از خَوِیشِ بَرِ آوَرْدَنْ, to recover one's senses.)

کُشْرِ چُنَانِکِه and کُشْرِ زِ آنِکِه occur frequently in poetry instead of the simple کُشْرِ.

XXXVIII.

١ —cf. the lines attributed to Maṣṣūr Hallāj (Ibn Khallikān, Arabic text, Ed. De Slane, p. 217, l. 1):

أَنَا مَنْ أَهْوَى وَ مَنْ أَهْوَى أَنَا
 نَحْنُ رُوحَانِ حَلَلْنَا بَدَنًا
 فَإِذَا أَبْصَرْتَنِي أَبْصَرْتَهُ
 وَإِذَا أَبْصَرْتَهُ أَبْصَرْتَنَا

I am he whom I love, and he whom I love is I;
 We are two souls dwelling in one body.
 When thou seest me, thou seest him,
 And when thou seest him, thou seest us both.

٢ —آبِ حَيَاتِ—xxi. ٦, note.

٣ —اخترانِ فلك الخ—so Tennyson:

the summer night that paused
 Among her stars to hear us; stars that hung
 Love-charmed to listen.

٦. —بِعِرَاقِيمِ وَ خُرَاسَانَ—our souls, united with the omnipresent deity, are no longer subject to the laws of Space and Time.

XXXIX.

١ —خواجه—the allusion in beyt ٦ (آن آفتاب) points to Shamsi Tabriz, and not another of the poet's spiritual teachers.

٢ —فَرِيضَةُ دَارِمٍ—cf.

• بر عاشقان فریضه بُود جستجوی دوست

(T. 137. 2). •

Lovers are bound in duty to seek the Beloved.

۳ آن باغبان—the Keeper of the garden of created things, i.e. God.

ماهی که آب دید الخ ه—the metaphor represents the soul as remembering her heavenly origin (xvii. ۱, note), and scorning the world.

بماند—بماند would be contra metr. See note on xi. ۱۰.

دورِ رنك و بو—the earth, where all is fleeting and unsubstantial.

۶ آن آفتاب—cf. iv. ۸, note.

پاك خورشيد—‘utterly consumed it.’ Cf. the English use (archaic or slang) of ‘clean’: e.g. clean gone out of mind.

اگر هست تو بتو—the manifold phenomenal attributes, which envelop and benumb the soul, melt away like snow in the sunbeams of divine beauty. Cf. •

فُسرده ماند یخی کآن بزیر سایه بُود

ندید شِشِعهٔ آفتاب تابانم

تبشیرِ رخ خورشید هر یخی که بدید

بخویش بالذ و گوید که آب حیوانم

(T. 240. 13).

The ice that remains in the shade is frozen:

It saw not the brilliance of my glowing Sun.

All ice that has seen the smile of the Sun's face

Grows itself again, and says, ‘I am the Water of Life.’

۷، خاصه کسی الخ—these words are connected with عاشق کجا بمآند الخ in beyt ۵.

۸ آن کیمیایِ بی حد الخ—cf. iv. ۷, note.

مسی ... زر شد—iv. ibid., xxvii. ۸, note.

بَارْجِعُوا—إِرْجِعُوا is found several times in the Kor'ān, but I do not think that the poet had any of these passages in his mind. Probably the reference here is to Kor. LXXXIX. 28, which is a favourite Sūfi text (see xxix. ۳, note).

۹ در خواب شو ز عالم—let the senses sleep that the soul may awake. Cf. Hāfiz, i. 220. 7 :

بر دوخته ام دیده چو باز از همه عالم
تا دیده من بر رُخ زیبایِ تو بازست

I have shut mine eye, like a falcon, to all the world, Since my (inward) eye is open to thy beauteous countenance.

هر شبی از دامِ تن ارواح را
میرهانی 'میکنی الواح را
میرهند ارواح هر شب زین قفس
فارغان بی حاکم و محکوم کس
شب ز زندان بیخبر زندانیان
شب ز دولت بیخبر سلطانان

۱ کندن نقوش را از الواح = کندن الواح را Cf. eradere genas (Propertius, iv. 8. 26).

نی غم و اندیشه سود و زیان
 نی خیالِ این فلان و آن فلان
 حالِ عارفِ این بُود بیخواب هم
 گفت یزدان هُم رُقُودُ زین مرم
 از احوالِ دنیا روز و ش
 چون قَلَم در پنجهٔ تقلیبِ ربِّ

(Masnavi, 14. 4).

Spirits every night from the body's snare Thou freest, and makest the tablets clean (by erasing all sensual impressions).

Spirits are set free every night from this cage,
 Independent, neither ruled nor ruling.

At night prisoners forget their prison,
 At night kings forget their power.

There is no sorrow, no brooding over gain and loss,
 No thought of this person or that person.

This is the state of the mystic, even when he is awake:
 God hath said, "(Thou would'st deem them awake) while they slept¹." Flee not from this².

He is asleep, day and night, to the affairs of the world,
 Like a pen in the controlling hand of the Lord³.

شش جهت—the world is regarded as a cube, and its six sides or faces are: before and behind, right and left, above and below.

² Alluding to the words, لَوَلَّيْتَ مِنْهُمْ فِرَارًا, verily thou would'st have turned from them and fled (ibid.).

³ Cf. xxx. ٢, note.

رأس الجمار ۱۰۱—this expression (in Arabic) is applied to one whose presence in a company creates embarrassment and checks the flow of conversation. The poet means to say that, while 'self' exists, the highest knowledge is unattainable.

ره نِهان ۱۲—the supernatural way of 'illumination' and 'intuition.' See XI. ۵, note.

XL.

درخانه دل الخ ۱—see xv. ۳, note.

هُوَ الْحَقَّ ۴—Kor. xxii. 6.

دغل فروشان ۴—impostors in the guise of spiritualists (باده‌نوشان). Cf. Maṣnavī, 12. 7 :

روی هر يك مينگر ميدار پاس
 بو كه كردی تو ز خدمت بوشناس
 چون بسی ابليس آدمروى هست
 پس بهر دستى نشايد داد دست

Look on every one's face, and keep watch :
 It may be that by devotion you will grow familiar with the scent (of Truth).
 Since there are many devils with human features,
 'Tis wrong to give your hand to every hand.

قلاشى ۵—drunken revelry. For the dropping of the tashdid cf. ix. ۱۹, note.

چون آينه است عالم الخ ۶—each atom of Not-being reflects a divine attribute : the sum of these reflected rays of Being is 'the perfect image' of God.

که جزوی ز کُل زیاده — cf. Gulshani Rāz, 635 :

وَجُودِ آن جُزْوَ دَانِ کَزِ کُلِ فُزُونَسْتِ

که مَوْجُودَسْتِ کُلِ وِیْنِ بَارِکُونَسْتِ

Regard Absolute Being as the part which is greater than the whole,

For the whole is actual being—and this is absurd (contrary to rule).

Lāhijī says, ‘Absolute Being, وَجُودُ, by the individualisation, تَشْخُصُ, and phenomenalisation, تَعْيُنُ, which occur to it, gets the name of مَوْجُودُ, actual being, and therefore وَجُودُ is a part of every مَوْجُودُ; for مَوْجُودُ is وَجُودُ plus تَعْيُنُ. Absolute Being, again, is greater than its whole because it contains all مَوْجُودُ’ (ibid., Whinfield’s note).

✓ چون سبزه شو پیاده — be lowly and obedient. Cf.

سبزه پیاده گشته سَمَنِ پَیْکِ کُلِ شُدِه

اندر رِکَابِ کُلِ چو غُلامان و کُلِ سُوَارِ

(R. 76. 12).

۸ تیغ کشنده — i.e. کشنده.

هَمِرِ عَقْلِ بَادِ دَادِه — Reason is annihilated in the mystical union of the soul with God. بَادِ دَادِه stands for داده. Cf. که خواهد بَادِ دَادَنِ سَرِ (T. 94. 3).

۹ در کَرْدَنِمِ قِلَادِه — cf. the phrases نِعْمَتِكَ قِلَادَه نِعْمَه, طَوْقُ قِلَادَه (Lane, under قِلَاد), and see note on عُنْقَى,

II. ۶.

For Ṣalālu 'ddīn see II. ۱۴, note.

XLI.

۲ مِضْرَابِ زخمه—با زخمه چو آتش the Roman plectrum.

~ پردهٔ عراقی—this musical mode, like the Dorian measure, has a solemn and grave character suitable to war and religion.

مقصود باده بودش الخ—he sang ‘as mortal lovers do,’ but there was a deeper meaning in his words Wine is an emblem of the Divinity. Cf. ‘Omar Khayyām, Quatrain 287 :

چه کُفر و چه اسلام چه طاعت چه کُناه
مقصود توئی بهانه بردار از پیش

آب رز—آب هـ

زند زبانه—literally, ‘darts a tongue of flame.’

۶ را—از بهر عاشقانرا is redundant in this construction, which is not uncommon.

۷ از آن پی—most of the ‘nominal’ prepositions may be thus used, e.g. از آن پس.

۸ چشمِ بدرا—xxv. ۱۱, note.

۹ شمسُ الحقِ جهانم—iv. ۸, note.

XLII.

۱ همرنگِ جماعت شو—the interpretation of these words is doubtful. (1) جماعت means ‘the community or brotherhood of saints and spiritual men.’ Cf. Nafahātu

'l Uns, p. 206, l. 5 : 'Associate with God, or if ye cannot, with those who are the associates of God, in order that the blessing of their society may lead you to him.' Jalāl'uddīn gives the same advice in the Maṣnavī (22. 4 ; Redhouse, p. 53, l. 412) :

يك زمانى صحبتى با اوليا
 بهتر از صد ساله طاعت بى ریا
 گُر تو سَنَكِ خاره و مرمر شوى¹
 چون بصاحبِ دل رسى شَوهر شوى
 مِهَرِ پاكان در میانِ جانِ نشان
 دل مَدِه اِلَّا بِمِهَرِ دلخوشان
 كويِ نَوميدى مَرَو اُمیدهاست
 سويِ تاريخى مَرَو خورشیدهاست
 دل تُرا در كويِ اهلِ دل كَشید
 تن تُرا در حبسِ آب و گِلِ كَشید
 هينِ غِذايِ دل بَدِه از همدلى
 رَو بَجو اقبال را از مُقبلى

(2) جماعت is used mystically = divine unity, the All. Cf. 'Attār, Manṭiqu'ṭṭair, 1315 :

هر كه او همرنك يارِ خویش نیست
 عشقِ او جُز رنك و بوئى بیش نیست

Whoever is not of one essence with his Beloved,
 His love is no better than colour and perfume.

For the جماعت of Mohammedan Theology = 'consensus of opinion in the Church,' see Dozy, Supplément aux Dictionnaires Arabes, under جمع. Naturally Jalālu'ddīn, in his condemnation of schism, is not speaking as one of the orthodox.

کوي خرابات—the tavern signifies God. Cf. Gulshani Rāz, 839 seq.

دُرْدُکشان—like باده‌نوشان (XL. ۴), those who drain to the lees the cup of celestial love.

هل تا نشوی—cave ne fias. هله and هل (xxxiv. ۴) are lightened (مُخَفَّف) forms of هلا.

چشمِ نِهان—see XI. ۵, note.

بِکَشایِ دو دستِ خود—this may also mean: 'be open-handed, sacrifice all that you have.' Cf. note on جان‌بخشی (xxix. ۵).

بِشکن بُتِ خاکی را الخ—destroy 'self,' which veils you from God.

از بهرِ عجزی را—for this construction see xli. ۶, note, and for the meaning of عجز, xiii. ۶, note.

چندین چه کُشی کابین—why do you consent to pay so heavy a price? By Mohammedan law the dowry is paid to the wife (see Lane's Arabian Nights, Vol. I. p. 321; Modern Egyptians, Vol. I. p. 202). Cf. Hāfiz, I. 438. 5:

خَوشِ عروسِیست جهان از ره صورت لیکن

هر که پیوست بدو عُمَرِ خَوشِ کابین داد

The world is a fair bride as to outward looks,
But he who weds with her gives his life's joy in exchange.

So 'Omar Khayyām, Quatrain 59 :

گُفتم بِعَرُوسِ دَهرِ کابینِ تو چیست
گُفتا دلِ حُرِّمِ تو کابینِ من

To Destiny, my bride, I said: 'What is thy dowry?'
'My dowry,' she answered, 'is thy heart's happiness.'

سه نان—cf. XVI. v, note.

ه خشخاش—Virgil's 'soporiferum papaver.'

طعمِ دهان—the fragrant lips of the Beloved. Food and sleep produce spiritual lethargy.

ساقی—cf. III. v, note.

دور—در مجلینِ او دُوری, like circulus in Latin, denotes any company for social and convivial intercourse. Here it may refer to the mystic dance (سماع). Cf. Brown's Dervishes, p. 225: 'They (the Mevleves) commence by forming a circle, seated on sheep-skins spread on the floor at equal distances from each other; they remain nearly a half-hour in this position, the arms folded, the eyes closed, the head inclined, and absorbed in profound meditation.'

اینجاست ربا الخ—cf. v

بتو گر جانِ دهر باشد تجارت (T. 241. 9).

که بدهی بهر جانی صد جهانم

تركِ فلانى — تركِ فلانى is here an abstract noun.

The miṣrā' should be rendered: "

Go, renounce personality, that you may regard the being of the Person.

For فُلَان used of God cf. vi. ۸.

أَلَمْ نَكُنْ أَرْضَ : Kor. iv. 99 — بَا وَسَعَتْ اَرْضَ اَلله ۱۰
اَللهِ وَاسِعَةً فَتَهَاجِرُوا فِيهَا, Was not God's earth wide enough that ye might take refuge therein? بَا notwithstanding (xi. ۳, note).

در حبس چه خُسپیدی — why are you fast asleep in the chains of sense and worldly illusion? See note on xxxvi. ۳.

ز اندیشه کُره کم زن do not bewilder yourself by useless thinking. Cf. xiii. ۷۲, note. مزن کم زن. But it seems probable that ز اندیشه کُره stands for ز اندیشه کُره (by فَكِّ اِصَافَت, xxv. ۷۳, note), and that کم زن is synonymous with تَرْك كُورْتَن. Translate:

Pass away from thought of the knot (problem), that you may see the solution in Paradise.

This rendering brings out more clearly the double contrast of کُره with شرح, and of اندیشه (opinion) with بینی (actual vision).

سَكَّتَ عَنِ — like the Arabic خاموش شو از گفتن ۱۱
اَلْكَلَامِ.

XLIII.

قَمَرِیْسَتْ رَوِ نَمُودِه ۲ — vii. ۷, note.

رسد از کمانِ پنهان الخ ~ Man is defenceless against the shafts of divine love: he must die to the world. Cf.

ای بهر هَنگامه دایمِ عشقِ تو هَنگامه‌گیر
 وی چکیده خونِ ما بر راه رهرو را نشان
 صد هزاران زخمِ بر سینه ز زخمِ تیرِ عشق
 صد شکاری خسته و نه تیر پیدا نه کمان
 (T. 52. 11^a).

O thou, the snare of whose love is eternally fascinating,
 And O thou, who hast spilled our blood upon the way
 for a sign to the wayfarer,
 Innumerable are the wounds on the bosom pierced by
 the arrow of love,
 Many the wounded victims, but neither arrow nor bow is to be seen.

مِسْ هَسْتِیَّتِ الْخِ ع—cf. IV. ۷; XXVII. ۸; XXXIX. ۸. The base phenomenal alloy, which enters into the composition of every creature, is purified and spiritualised by love, as was Moses, when God revealed himself in glory to Mt Sinai and made it dust, and Moses fell in a swoon (Kor. VII. 139).

چو قارون—Qārūn (Korah) points to Mohammedans the moral of riches that 'grow in hell' and pride that goeth before destruction. See Kor. XXVIII. 76—81, with Sale's notes.

بذرونِ توستِ مصری الْخِ ه—within you is a divine element producing sweetness and harmony and love, just as the plantations of Egypt produce sugar-candy (نبات; see Rosenzweig's note on Hāfiz, I. 282. 5). شکر and مصر are often found together. Cf. T. 219. 6^a (VII. ۷, note), and Masnavī, 122. 2:

چونکہ ذو آلتون از غمش دیوانہ شد
مصر جانرا همچو شکرخانہ شد

When Dhū'l Nūn grew wild with longing for it (the light of inspiration),

It became, as it were, a sugar-shop to the Egypt of the soul (it filled his soul with sweetness).

۶. شُدۀ غلامِ صوتِ الخ—your adoration is fixed on something external, whereas that which you seek is, in reality, your better self. Cf. the notes on XVII. vi, XXVI. v.

تو چو یوسفی الخ—you are the mirror of divine beauty—and you turn away from the mirror! Cf. Whinfield's Masnavi, p. 18 seq.

۹. شش فتیلہ—eyes, ears, nose, and mouth.

آن شرر—'divinae particula aurae,' Eckhart's 'funkelin der sêle.' See Vaughan, Hours with the Mystics,
Vol. I. p. 147.

۱۰. دل بکعبہ—the soul, being the house of God (بَيْتُ اللَّهِ), is the Ka'ba to which Sūfis make their pilgrimage.

ز خری الخ—it is not helplessness, but stupid obstinacy, that prevents you from travelling towards the Truth.

سعادت حق بفرماید تا ترا = بکشاندت سعادت ۱۱ بکشند. For this personal use of سعادت cf. Dozy, Supplément aux Dictionnaires Arabes, under XLIV.

تو یارِ خلوتِ نازی الخ ۲—the soul, before she entered the world, enjoyed intimate union with God. See xyii. ۱, note.

~ سفرى كُن —cf. xix. ۱—۶.

فِي مَقْعَدٍ : —cf. Kor. LXIV. 55 : نَدِيمِ مَجْلِسِ اُنْسِ ۴
 صِدْقِ, (the pious shall dwell) in an assembly of Truth.
 اُنْسِ conveys the idea of perfect friendship and devotion.
 It is defined by Junaid as 'freedom from shyness (اَلْحَشْمَةُ) without loss of reverence' (اَلْهَيْبَةُ); by Dhū 'l Nūn as 'absence of reserve between lover and beloved' (اِنْسَاطُ) اَلْمُحِبِّ اِلَى الْمَحْبُوبِ; by Ruwaim (Nafahātu 'l Uns,
p. 107, l. 12 seq.), as 'holding aloof from all but God, even from yourself'; and by Muḥiyyu' ḍḍīn Ibnu 'l 'Arabī (Kitābu 't-ta'rīfāt, p. 287), as 'the effect produced in the heart by contemplation of the divine beauty.'

كه ره برى بنشانه الخ ۵ —in order to penetrate the inmost sanctuary of Absolute Being the pilgrim must brush aside all phenomenal illusions.

بیار اشك و چو مُشتاق كُردرا بنشان

كه روى ماه نه بينيم تا درين كُرديم

(T. 259. 1).

Shed tears and lay the dust, like a passionate lover,
 For while we are in this dust we cannot see the Beloved's face.

Cf. Gulshani Rāz, 195; Hāfiz, l. 324. 6; and note on رويوشها.

١٠ حواس پنج نماز است الخ—the senses are to the heart as outward observance to deep spiritual faith. For the five daily prayers performed by Moslems see Sale's Preliminary Discourse, p. 147 seq.; Lane's Arabian Nights, Vol. 1. p. 18 seq. The parallel between the five senses and the five prayers, corresponds to that between the seven divisions of the heart (see Vullers under هفت خلیفه) and the seven verses of Al Fātiḥa (note on vi. ٥; Noldeke's Sketches from Eastern History, p. 38).

١١ فرو خورَد الخ—the glimmering contingent universe melts away and vanishes in the full glory of Being.

سَهِيلِ جان—Canopus rises in the south; hence the allusion to رُكْنِ يَمَانِي—the south-west corner of the Ka'ba. Burckhardt says south-east, but this is a mistake (see the Plan in Burton's Pilgrimage to El Medinah and Meccah, Vol. III. p. 288).

١٢ سَعَادَت is said to mean 'escaping from self by vision of God' (Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 472, l. 11).

١٣ حَدِيثِ عَشْقِ الخ—keep silence concerning the high mysteries of love, which are revealed only to those far advanced on the spiritual path (سَالِكَان = رَهْگُزْدَان).

تو بندگانِ خُدا کُن—'do thou, who art less divinely gifted, learn obedience' (عِبَوِيَّت). This is the first lesson, and also the last; therefore even the perfect man must not linger in the state of فنا, but throw off his intoxication and comply with the law. See Gulshani Rāz, 347—368.

XLV.

۲ نقد—the pure gold of the spirit.

۴ مشارِقْ (plural of مَشْرِقْ) signifies 'the different points of the horizon, from whence the sun rises in the course of the year' (Sale's Kor'ān, Vol. II. p. 309, note).

۵ بخواب—the sleep of phenomenal existence. See xxxvi. ۵, note.

دیارِ دِیَّارِی, literally, a dweller, is mostly used with a negative, and seldom occurs in Persian except in the phrase دیارِ نی, there is no one.

۶ چشمِ خرد—the 'intelligentiae oculus' described by Richard of St Victor (Vaughan's Hours with the Mystics, Vol. I. p. 128). Cf. xi. ۵, note.

نفس همچو بحر افتاد الخ—the animal soul is driven blindly along by its ruling passion. Cf.

هوای نفس مهار است و خلق چون شتران

بغیر آن شترِ مست را مهارِ مکنیر

(T. 204. 5).

Sensual desire is a bridle, and men are as camels: Do not suppose that there is any bridle, except that, for the senseless camel (the soul of Man: cf. T. 140. 4, quoted in the note to xxxvii. ۱۳. In other words, the body and its passions are the only obstacles to union with the Divinity).

٧ عقیده شیرین—probably عقیده here means ‘honey’ (cf. یَعْقِد, or ‘date-syrup’ (رُب). The name عَقید is given to a sort of dried curds, which the Arabs drink melted in water, but this beverage, although ‘cooling and refreshing’ is ‘vile-tasted’ and ‘boasts few attractions to the stranger’ (Burton, Pilgrimage to El Medinah and Meccah, Vol. 1. p. 362). The only meaning of عَقیده recognised by the dictionaries, viz. ‘article of faith,’ ‘doctrine,’ is inappropriate: the poet obviously contrasts عَقیده with سرکه and غوره, as the sweet fruits of the spirit with the bitter gall of worldly lusts.

٨ طیب — cf.

آمد عشق چاشتی شکلِ طیب پیشِ من
دست نهاد بر رگم گُفت ضعیف شد مَجَس
(T. 210. 12^a).

Love came to me at morn in the guise of a physician;
He laid his hand on my vein and said, ‘The pulse is weak.’

٩ سر...دستاری — for this word-play cf. T. 247. 2; 251. 12. From Prof. Cowell’s MS. (C²) I quote the following beyt, because it affords another example of عقیله (xxxvii. ١٣, note):

تو در عقیله ترتیبِ ریش و دستاری
پیغمونه رطلِ گِهرانِ خوار را بدست آری

You are in the bonds of (absorbed in) the arrangement of beard and turban:

How will you gain Him who quaffs the mighty flagon
(of love)?

۱۰ سیاه—buried in the dark attributes of Not-being.
Cf. note on دیگی, xxxvi. ۱۳.

۱۱ کُجاست تاجرِ مسعود الخ—cf. XLII. ۷, and note.

مُشتري طالع—a compound adjective = ‘born under a happy star.’ مُشتري means (a) the planet Jupiter, (b) purchaser (خریدار).

گرمدرار—cf. Sa’di, Gulistān, p. 23, fourth line from the foot:

گرم تا کی بماند این بازار

How long will this mart remain busy?

۱۴ که کف ز بحر و یست—I have rendered کف by ‘hand,’ in order to show the symmetry of this line with the two preceding it.

XLVI.

۱ سردان—such as dogmatic theologians and rationalising philosophers. Cf. xxxvi. ۱۱, note.

۲ صورت—see Whinfield’s Masnavi, p. 70.

همره همدرد—cf. Sa’di, Gulistān, p. 114:

Thou hast no pity. Then God send
A fellow-sufferer for my friend,
To mourn with me and ne’er have done;
Two faggots higher blaze than one.

۳ ار بشکنی—if you destroy the earthly chrysalis.

۴ که ترا = کت.

کی دهر فرد شوی—each individual entity is finally absorbed in the All. Perhaps, however, دهر فرد should be translated 'a single pearl.' Cf.

بصَدَف مانم و خندم چو مرا در شکنند

کارِ خامان بُود از فتح و ظفر خندیدن

(T. 275. 10).

I am like a shell and laugh when they break me;
To laugh in triumph and victory is a trait of the inexperienced.

(خندم refers to the sound caused by crushing the shell.)

جای تو صدر بُود —cf. Hatiz, II. 254. 3:

در جاهِ عشق و دولتِ رندانِ پاکباز

پیوسته صدرِ میکدها بود مسکنم

جا بجا بر گذری —Man, during his phenomenal extrusion, is a homeless vagabond in the world. Cf. Gulshani Rūz, 281, and note.

عددِ عددِ نرد —عدد is either 'die' (as numerus in Latin poetry), or 'piece,' which gives a better sense.

شرد —در آن شرد sometimes - شردون, but here, I think, - شرد آفتاب, the atoms floating in a sunbeam, with an allusion to Shamsi Tabriz.

XLVII.

الْعَطْفَ عَلَى شَيْءٍ —بر سر چیزی بودن —بر سر کینی ۲ to incline towards a thing. Cf. Surūrī's commentary on تو بر سرِ قدرِ خویش میباهش و وقار

(Gulistān, p. 27).

Attend to (be mindful of) your rank and dignity.

Similar phrases are سر در سرِ چیزی داشتن and سر در سرِ چیزی کردن.

۳ سببِ غَیْرِتِ تُسْتِ الْخ — see notes on IV. ۲, XXIII. ۷.

۴ و اَكْثَرِ پَرْدِه درِی تو الْخ — cf. Maṣnavī, 8. 2; Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 7 :

پَرْدِه بر دار و برهنه گُش که من •

می نَنجَم با صَنَم در پیرهن

گُفتم ار عُرِیان شُود او در عِیان

نی تو مانی نی کِنارت نی میان

مست — سرخوش — cf. سرِ ایمان به مَیّت خُوش ۵

همه را گُوش کشیدی — cf.

چونکه در آید بَقْصُورِ دِمَاغ •

اُفتد از بامِ نِگون هوش هوش

چونکه کشد گُوشِ خِرَدِ سَویِ خُود

گُویَد از دردِ خِرَدِ گُوشِ گُوش

(T. 74. 12).

When he enters the chambers of the brain,

Reason falls headlong from the roof.

When he pulls the ear of Intelligence towards him,

It cries in pain, 'My ear, my ear!'

۷. چه روى تو الخ —cf. Shakespeare, Sonnet LXVII.:

Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow, since his rose is true?

If تو is addressed to the reader, the change of person, though harsh, is not unexampled. It may, however, denote the Beloved, whom the poet upbraids for having forsaken him.

۸. نفرى كف ببريدند —xv. ۱۲, note.

۹. ز پلیدی و ز خوبی —of flesh and spirit, Not-being and Real Being.

۱۰. فاذا سَوَّيْتُهُ: Kor. xv. 29. —چو درو روح دمیدی (God said to the angels:) When therefore I shall have completed him (Adam) and breathed of my spirit into him, do ye fall and worship him. روح is probably used here of the reasonable soul (نفس ناطقه). See Gulshani Rāz, 318 and note, 493.

۱۲. ز نومیدي اول الخ —when Man reflects of what he was created, and what, by gradual evolution, he has become, can he doubt the ultimate reality of his deepest aspirations, wild and impracticable as they seem at present? See XII. ۱—۱۰, and note, XVIII. ۱, note, Whinfield's Masnavi, pp. 216, 231, Gulshani Rāz, 317—338.

۱۳. کلید —Greek κλεῖς (κλειδ-), Arabic اِقْلِيد. The 'key' is Love.

XLVIII.

۲ قفس—Latin capsă or capsus (Noldeke, Persische Studien, p. 38; Fraenkel, Die Aramäischen Fremdwörter, p. 118). As s in loan-words may be represented either by س or ص, the form قفس is equally correct.

۳ تو بازِ خاص بُدی الخ—the story of the ‘white falcon,’ whose beak and claws were cut by a ‘vile old woman’ (کُوزِ کمپیری), is told in the Maṣnavī, 362. 18 seq.; Whinfield’s Maṣnavī, p. 203. For the allegory cf. x. ۷, note, XLII. ۴, note.

طبلِ باز—see notes on XVI. ۳, XXIX. ۳.

۴ بُلبُلِ مستی میانه جُعدان—I cannot find this in the Maṣnavī. But cf. the tale of the Falcon and the Owls (ibid. 126. 13; Whinfield’s Maṣnavī, p. 76).

۵ بسی خُمار کشیدی الخ—XIII. ۸, note.

خراباتِ جاودان—XLII. ۱, note.

۸ تاجِ را...آفتاب—cf. IV. ۸. He who is eternally glorified by union with the source of all light, desires no earthly crown.

از میان...کمر—one meaning of میان is ‘waist.’ رفتن—e inediq̄ abire (to die).

۹ دو چشمِ کُشته—obliquis oculis, enviously.

سویِ جانِ نِثری—you look back with regret on the life of your individual soul, which is now exalted above life.

۱۰ خَرَجْتُ أَبْتَغِي—in شکارِ شُکور—cf. the saying, رَحِمَ اللَّهُ, I went forth to seek the bounty of God (Lane under 'راح). شُكُور is the plural of شُكْر, which, as applied to God, means 'requital,' 'recompense.' شُكُور, the Giver of rewards, is a possible reading.

با دو پر—i.e. with hope and fear. According to the Sūfis, اَلْخَوْفُ وَالتَّوَجُّهُ لِلْمَرْءِ كَالْجَنَاحَيْنِ لِلطَّائِرِ (Būstān, p. 31, last line).

دو پر—چو سِر is followed by سِر (suggesting پَر), which leads up to سِنان. These trifles would hardly be worth notice, if they did not illustrate the artificial character even of the best Persian poetry.

جانِبِ سِنانِ رفتی - this strange metaphor may perhaps allude to the sport of hunting the antelope with hawks. 'The buck is seldom taken. The Arabs, are, indeed, afraid to fly their hawks at the latter, as these fine birds, in pouncing, frequently impale themselves on its sharp horns' (Malcolm, Sketches of Persia, p. 54).

که پیش بادِ خِزانی الخ—all things tremble and flee before the wind of death; only the soul, conscious of immortality, remains unmoved and triumphant.

خموش...از—see XLII. ۱۱, note.

رنجِ کُفْت و کُوی—speech is finite, silence infinite.

مُخَسِب—the soul, waking from the dark night of the world, enjoys eternal day in the bosom of God. Cf. xxxvi. ۴, note.

ADDITIONAL NOTES.

I. | (note). Cf. the ḥadīṣ: لَا أَنْظُرُ إِلَى صَوْرِكُمْ وَإِنَّمَا أَنْظُرُ إِلَى قُلُوبِكُمْ, I do not look at your outward forms, but only at your hearts. •

I. | .. The variant نَتِّمِنُ كُنَى (L.) must be taken as a compound. Translate: If thou art the Bezel-maker's thrall, O master. So we find (T. 133. 7^a):

با تو ز زیان چه باك داریم
ای سودکن همه زیانها

With Thee how should we be afraid of loss, •
O Thou, who turnest every loss to gain?

II. | ۴ (note). See also Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 539.

IV. |. Cf. Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 422, l. 4: Shaikh Aḥmad Ghazzālī relates that his shaikh, i. e. Abū Bakr Nassāj, exclaimed in his prayers, "O God, with what design was I created?" Answer came: "The design was that I might behold myself in the mirror of thy soul, and plant my love in thy heart."

IV. v. کردست بر سر اکیمیا : 'has converted, copper into the Philosophers' Stone.' For the derivation of کیمیا see Dozy, Supplément, sub voc.

IV. ۱۱. Cf.

کردم از حیرت سجودی پیش او
گفت بی ساجد سجودی خوش بر آر
آه بی ساجد سجودی چون بود
گفت بیچون باشد و بی خارخار
گردنک را پیش کردم گفتمش
ساجدی را سر ببر از ذو الفقار
تیغ تا او بیش زد سر بیش شد
تا برست از گردنم سر صد هزار
(T. 206. 6).

I prostrated myself in bewilderment before him:
He said, 'Perform joyfully the act of prostration without the agent.'

'Alas! how can there be an act of prostration without an agent?'

He said, 'Tis an act involving neither method nor perplexity.'

I offered my neck and said to him,
'Sever the agent's head with Dhū 'lfiqār' (xxvi. ۳, note).
The more he plied the sword, the more my head increased,
Till there grew from my neck innumerable heads.

(For the last couplet, cf. xviii. ۳, note.)

According to Abū 'l 'Abbās Dinavari (Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 161, l. 18), "The first stage of prayer (الْتَكْوِيْن) is to forget self, and the last stage is the effacement of the worshipper in the act of worship without consciousness of worship, and such absorption in the object of worship as precludes return to the subject thereof; this is the state of supreme annihilation” (فَنَاءُ الْفَنَاءِ).

VI. ۱ (note). Further definitions of فقر are found in the Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 10, ll. 18—23; p. 11, ll. 3, 5, 14; p. 102, ll. 14—21; p. 242, l. 5; p. 301, l. 15; p. 303, l. 2.

VI. ۲ (note). The words مَا لَا عَيْنٌ رَأَتْ وَلَا أُذُنٌ سَمِعَتْ وَلَا خَطَرَ عَلَى قَلْبِ بَشَرٍ, What eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor hath it entered into the heart of man, are quoted from an ḥadīṣ, which is a mere translation of the passage in I. Corinthians.

VII. ۴. چون دیده پُر شود, i.e. with tears.

VIII. ~ (note). Cf. the saying of Ma'rūf Karkhī (Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 43, l. 1): “Beware lest God behold thee save in the garb of a beggar” (فِي زِيٍّ مُسْكِينٍ).

IX. ~ (note). Cf.

فرشته رُست بعلم و بهیمه رُست بجهل

درین میان به تنازع بماند مردم‌زاد

کُهی همیکشدش علم سوی علّیین

کُهی جہل به پستی که هرچه بادا باد

(T. 164. 8).

The angel grew with knowledge, the beast with ignorance; Man remained in dispute¹ between them.

Sometimes knowledge draws him to the seventh Heaven, Sometimes ignorance drags him down, so that (he says),

‘Come what will!’

(T. reads مردم راد, but this is plainly an error.)

IX. ۱۷ (note). Shaikh Abū Sa'īd ibn Abī 'l Khair said: "The veil between man and God is not earth or heaven, not the empyrean (عرش) or the throne (کُرسی); the veil is thy conceit and egoism; when they are removed, thou hast arrived at God" (Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 345, l. 15). See also ibid. p. 147, l. 3, p. 212, l. 21, p. 304, l. 6.

IX. ۱۹. کوزۀ ادراک: the expression, کوزۀ ادراک, occurs in a speech attributed to Jalālu 'ddīn (Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 537, l. 15).

X. ۲. The longing for immediate vision of the divine beauty is illustrated by Shu'aib, to whom, 'when his cries and wailing and dewy tears passed beyond measure, there came at dawn a voice from Heaven':

شَرُّ مُجْرِمِی بِخَشِیدِمَتِ دَرِ جُرْمِ آمُرِزِیدِمَتِ

² یاری (T.).

صُفَتْ ار دو چشمِ عاقبت خواهند دیدن روی او
 هر جزو من چشمی شود کی غم خورم من از غمی
 (T. 12. 11⁴).

XI. ۴. دهان باز : دهانِ باز, with omitted preposition, may be the correct reading.

XI. ۸. The following definition of مُرید is ascribed to Manṣūr Hallāj : هُوَ الْوَالِدُ الْقَصْدُ إِلَى اللَّهِ سُبْحَانَهُ : i.e., as Jāmī paraphrases it, 'The murīd is he who from the first makes Almighty God the goal of his efforts, and is never satisfied or engrossed by anything until he attains it' (Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 174, l. 3).

XIII. ۱۵ (note). تمیز 'clean' in Turkish.

XIV. ۱۰ (note). زهد : cf. Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 131, ll. 20—22.

XIV. ۱۱ (note). استقامت : cf. Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 131, ll. 7—11 ; p. 158, last line.

XV. ۱۴ (note). بیشه شیران : cf. Dante, Inferno, Canto I. According to Boccaccio, the 'selva selvaggia,' where the poet lost his way, represents the path of contemplative life : the wild beasts are the sensual passions. But possibly بیشه شیران here the World of Ideas (cf. Rosen's Maṣnawī, p. 154, note 533). Giordano Bruno, allegorising the story of Actaeon, describes Actaeon (the intellect) as letting loose his dogs (thoughts) 'upon the track of savage beasts in forests wild.' These 'savage beasts,' he continues, are 'the intelligible kinds of ideal conceptions, which are occult, followed by few, visited but rarely, and which do not disclose themselves to all those who seek them' (The Heroic Enthusiasts, translated by Williams, Vol. I. p. 91). If this explanation be accepted, we must read with V. مزن in beyt ۱۸.

XVI. ۹. أَوَارِثَتِي كَوْهَ الْخ: cf. the saying, Gnostics (اهل معرفت) are the wild beasts of God: in the world they do not associate with mankind (Naḡahātu 'l Uns, p. 62, l. 8).

XVI. ۱۰. Cf. Naḡahātu 'l Uns, p. 181, l. 1: 'The ways to God are more than the number of the stars in heaven, yet I desire one of them and cannot find it'; and again, 'Be content with the pain of search: what have you to do with finding?' (ibid. p. 422, l. 2): 'He is not to be found by search, but the seeker finds him and does not seek until he finds him' (ibid. p. 83, l. 13).

XVI. ۱۸ (note). Phaedrus (III. 19) tells this anecdote of Esop:

'Et quidam e turba garrulus,
Aesope, medio sole, quid cum lumine?
Hominem, inquit, quaero, et abiit festinans domum.'

In the Māḡnavī the heading is: حِكَايَتِ آن رَاهِبِ الْخ. Lévêque (Les Mythes et les Légendes de l'Inde et la Perse, p. 586) quotes from the Avadānas a very similar talê, of which a Brahman is the hero.

XVI. ۲۱. Khwāja Bahā' u'ddīn Naqshband defines ایمان as 'the fixed determination of the heart to deny all things, whether good or evil, in the pursuit of which (human) hearts are absorbed, except God' (Naḡahātu 'l Uns, p. 442, l. 16). For another definition, which, however, is only verbally different, see xxxv. ۲, note (Naḡahātu 'l Uns, p. 434, l. 10).

XVII. The gist of this poem occurs in a passage from

Heywood's Hierarchy of the Blessed Angels (England's Antiphon, p. 135):

I have wandered like a sheep that's lost,
 To find thee out in every coast:
Without I have long seeking bin,
 Whilst thou, the while, abid'st within.
 Through every broad street and strait lane
 Of this world's city, but in vain,
 I have enquired. The reason why?
 I sought thee ill: for how could I
 Find thee abroad, when thou, mean space,
 Hadst made within thy dwelling-place?

XVII. ۸. جَعَلْنَا : مقصدِ پیر و برنا : cf. Kor. II. 119: جَعَلْنَا الْبَيْتَ مَثَابَةً لِّلنَّاسِ.

XVIII. ۱. وَز بهر یکی جان السخ : cf. Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 107, ll. 2—5: 'The Shaikhu 'l Islām (Abū Isma'īl 'Abdu 'llāh ibn Abi Maṣṣūr Muḥammad Al-Anṣārī) said: "Spiritual sacrifice (بذل روح) does not consist in going forth to war that you may be slain, but rather in not disputing with God about your soul (که با الله تعالى بهر), in devoting to him your soul, body, and heart, while you still have them, and in not complaining of any affliction that comes to you from him."'

XIX. ۹. و نی بحر توان شد : cf. VIII. ۴, note.

XX. ۱ (note). Cf. the saying of Abū 'l Qāsim Naṣrābādī (Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 46, l. 16): جَذْبَةٌ مِنْ جَذَبَاتِ : الْحَقُّ تُرْبِي عَلَى عَمَلِ السَّعْلَيْنِ "one pull from God is better than (all) the actions of men and jinn" (quoted again, p. 441, l. 15, with the substitution of تَوَازِي for تُرْبِي عَلَى). For a discussion of the whole question see Whinfield's Maṣnavī, p. 18 seq. While he condemns those who busy themselves about worldly objects, Jalālu 'ddīn praises the divine aspiration, 'göttliche Bestrebung,' of the saints and prophets (Rosen's Maṣnavī, p. 133).

XX. ٣. It is related of Shamsi Tabrīz (Nafahātu 'l Unṣ, p. 536, l. 9) that when he arrived in the territory of Baghdād, he discovered Aḥadu 'ddīn Kirmānī, and asked him what he was doing. "I am beholding the moon," said he, "in a bowl of water." "Unless," replied Shamsu 'ddīn, "you have a boil on your neck, why do you not behold it in the sky?" The story is re-told p. 686, l. 17.

XXII. v. جَانِ دُورَم : Plotinus, following Plato in the Timaeus, distinguishes the immortal soul, which is derived immediately from God (ἡ ἀρχὴ τῆς ψυχῆς) and the mortal soul, constructed by the offspring of God (ψυχῆς ἄλλο εἶδος), which is 'subject to terrible and irresistible affections.' Jalālu 'ddīn refers here to the former- τῇ ἐτέρα ψυχῇ τῇ καθαρῇ (Plotinus, Enneades, II. 3. 9; Jowett's Plato, Vol. III. p. 653).

XXII. ٩. The Arabic proverb is: كُلُّ شَيْءٍ يَرْجِعُ إِلَى أَصْلِهِ, Every thing returns to its source.

XXII. ١٠. This metaphor of a divine centre, round which the phenomenal universe revolves, is a favourite with Plotinus (e.g. Enneades, VI. 9. 8). See Rousselot, Les Mystiques Espagnols, p. 105 seq.

XXIII. ٥. Cf. the sayings: لَا يَعْرِفُهُ أَحَدٌ غَيْرَهُ, He is known by none save Himself, and اَلْعِلْمُ فِي ذَاتِهِ اَللّٰهُ تَعَالٰى.

جَهْل¹, the knowledge of God's essence is ignorance (Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 243, ll. 11—12).

XXIII. ٦. اَنْ چِراغ the reference may be to Kor. xxiv. 35.

XXV. ١٦. از غَيْرِ اهلِ بِنَهْتَم : Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 140, l. 20: He is no gnostic (عارِف), who utters the knowledge of divine cognition (عِلْمِ مَعْرِفَت) before the worldly.

XXVI. ٩. ساده رنگی : (T

ندارد رنگ آن عالم و ليك از تابه ديده
چو نور از جامِ رنگ آميز اين سُرخ و كبود آمد
(T. 187 91)

That world is colourless, but from the reflexion of the eye,

Like the light from a cup of coloured glass, these red and blue (tints) arise

So Plotinus describes the Soul, which all true lovers desire, as: ἀχρώματον μὲν αὐτήν, ἀχρώματον δὲ καὶ τὴν σωφροσύνην ἔχουσιν (Enneades, I. 6. 5).

XXVIII. v (note). Cf. Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 299, ll. 15—18: God endows His servant with part of His own knowledge, and assigns to him suffering in proportion to the knowledge which He has bestowed, in order that he may support that suffering by virtue of knowledge. Cf. Plotinus, Enneades, III. 2. 4.

¹ عِلْمِ بِ for عِلْمِ فِي is not classical Arabic. We might render, 'Knowledge, in comparison with God's essence, is ignorance,' but this, probably, was not the sense intended by Dhū 'l Nūn, to whom the saying is ascribed. Cf. Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 37, l. 3, where we find اَلْعِلْمُ for اَلتَّفَكُّر

XXVIII. ۸ (note). Cf. the saying: النَّفْسُ هِيَ أُمُّ الْأَصْنَامِ, Self is the mother of idols.

XXIX. ۵ (note). In the first misrā' of the passage quoted from the Maḡnavī read, with the Būlāq Edition, سربخشی for سربازی.

XXXI. ۴ (note). Saqsīn is found again (T. 192. 8^a):

گویند که در سقسین ترکی دو کمان دارد

شر زآن دو یکی گم شد مارا چه زیان دارد

They say that in Saqsīn the Turkmān has two bows ;
If one of those has been lost, how am I the loser thereby?

It seems likely, from the mention of Turkmāns, that the city on the borders of China is here intended.

XXXI. ۸. The first misrā' is a quotation from Kor. LVII. 3.

XXXII. ~ (note). Cf. the saying, مِنْ أَلْقَلْبِ إِلَى أَلْقَلْبِ رَوْزَنَةِ, there is a window from one heart to another.

XXXIV. ۱ (note). Cf. Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 687, ll. 10—20 ; Plotinus, Enneades, I. 3. 2, I. 6. 2 and 4. According to the proverb: الْمَجَازُ قَنْطَرَةُ الْحَقِيقَةِ, Illusion is the bridge to Reality.

XXXVI. ۴ (note). So we find عجائب used adjectivally:

دل ما یافت ازین باده عجائب بوئی

(T. 253. 11).

XXXVI. ۱۴. Cf.

کیست در گوش که او میشنود آوازم

یا کدامست سخن میکند اندر دهنم

کیست در دیده که از دیده برون مینگردد .

یا چه جانست نگوئی که منش پیرهنم

(T. 256. 9).

Who is he in mine ear that hearkens to my voice, .

Or who is he that utters words in my mouth?

Who is he in mine eye that looks out of mine eye,

Or what is the soul—wilt thou not say—of which I am the garment?

XXXVI. ۱۵ (note). Cf. Junaid's definition of Sūfism: که ساعتی بنشینی بی تیمار (to sit for a while without repining (Nafahātu 'l Uns, p. 90, l. 20), and the saying of Shaikh 'Abdu 'llāh Balyānī:

درویشی نرنجیدن است اگر این حاصل کنی واصل کردی
(ibid. p. 295, l. 12).

XXXVI. ۱۶ (second miṣrā'). Cf.

جان چو روز است و تن ما چو شب و ما بمیان

واسطه روز و شب خویش مثال سحریم
(T. 252. 12).

The soul resembles day and the body night, and we in the middle

Are like the dawn between our own day and night.

(The iẓāfat of واسطه is dropped in scansion.)

XXXVIII. ۶. Cf. the anecdote which is told of Shaikh Mufarrij: He was seen by one of his companions on the day of 'Arafā (9th of Dhū 'l Hijja) at 'Arafāt, and by another, on the same day, in his own house, where they spent the whole day together. When these individuals met and communicated to each other what they had seen, they began to quarrel. Said one, "On the day of 'Arafā he was at 'Arafāt," and confirmed it with the oath of divorce. "He was at home all that day," retorted the other; and he too took the oath of divorce. The disputants went before Shaikh Mufarrij and told him what had passed between them. "You are both in the right," said he, "and neither of you has divorced his wife." A great personage relates: "I begged the Shaikh to explain how this could be, since the asseveration of each party seemed to involve the perjury of the other. The Shaikh desired a number of learned men, who were present, to speak on this point, and all did so, but none gave a final or sufficient answer. In the meantime it dawned upon me what the answer was, and, at the Shaikh's invitation, I spoke as follows: When a saint grows perfect in saintship, in the sense that his spirituality can be clothed in a visible shape, his power becomes absolute: he can show himself in many forms and in divers places simultaneously, just as he wishes. Therefore he may really have been seen in one form at 'Arafāt and in another form in his own house, and neither party has violated his oath." Shaikh Mufarrij said: "What you have spoken is the true answer" (Nafīḥāt 'l Uns, p. 676, l. 17 - - p. 677, l. 14).

XXXIX. ۱۱. There is in this couplet an allusion to the entry of Jesus into Jerusalem, riding upon an ass. See IV. ۹, note.

XXXIX. ۱۲. فَنِيْنِه: see Kazimirski, Dictionnaire Arabe-Français, under فَن. Cf. the phrase, فَنَّةٌ مِنَ الدَّهْرِ, a particular period of time.

APPENDIX I.

SOME ILLUSTRATIVE PASSAGES FROM THE DĪVĀN, WITH A LIST OF THE HISTORICAL AND AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL ALLUSIONS.

A. The Mystical Union of the Soul with God. Cf. Emerson: 'There is one mind common to all individual men. Who hath access to this universal mind is a party to all that is or can be done, for this is the only sovereign agent.'

- ۱ با تَه پِدَر در هر فلك يكچند دَوران كرده ام

 (T. 257. 11³).

I have circled awhile with the nine Fathers¹ in each heaven,
 For years I have revolved with the stars in their signs.
 I was invisible awhile, I was united with Him,
 I was in the kingdom of "or" nearer², I saw what I have seen.
 I have my nourishment from God, like a child in the womb;
 Man³ is born once, I have been born many times⁴.
 Clothed in the mantle of corporeal limbs, I have busied myself often with affairs,
 And often I have rent this mantle⁴ with my own hands.
 I have passed nights with ascetics in the monastery,
 I have slept with infidels before the idols in the pagoda.
 I am the theft of rogues⁵, I am the pain of the sick,
 I am both cloud and rain, I have rained in the meadows.

² xvii. ۱۰, note.

³ xviii. ۲, note.

⁴ cf. i. ۱۰, and note.

⁵ Prof. Bevan suggests درد عیاران, 'the pangs of the jealous'— a very attractive emendation.

Never did the dust of annihilation settle on my skirt, O dervish!

I have gathered a wealth of roses in the meadow and garden of eternity.

I am not of water nor fire, I am not of the froward wind; I am not moulded clay: I have mocked (transcended) them all.

O son, I am not Shamsi Tabrīz, I am the pure Light; If thou seest me, beware! Tell it not to any, that thou hast seen.

B. Traces of Neo-platonist influence. In the Introduction I have noticed the chief doctrines common to Jalālu 'ddīn and Plotinus. The resemblance is often obscured by metaphorical expression.

(a) Emanation.

ز جان تا تن بسی راهست و در تن مینماید جان

چنین دان جانِ عالمرا کز او عالمِ جوانستی

ز شخصِ عالمِ اکبری چنین پرگار بیجانست

که چرخ از بنی روانستی بدُنیا بی روانستی

زمین و آسمانها را مدد از عالمِ عقلست

که عقلِ اقلیمِ نورانی و پاک و دُرُفشانستی

جهانِ عقلِ روشن را مددها از صِفَت آمد

صِفَاتِ ذَاتِ خَلّاقی که شاهِ کُن فکانستی

(T. 58. 9^a).

¹ We should expect أَكْبَر, but cf. Maṣnavi (Bulāq Ed.) Bk 1. p. 100, l. 5, where the Turkish translation reads عالمِ کُبرادَه.

'Tis a long way from soul to body, and yet soul appears in body:

Regard thus the soul of the world, whereby the world is young (quicken'd).

Such is the material circumference¹ (depending) from the Person² in the Greater World,

That, if the circle³ (itself) were not endued with life, there would be no life in this world of ours.

To the earth and the heavens comes replenishment⁴ from the world of Reason⁵,

For Reason is a realm luminous⁶ and pure and pearl-scattering.

To the world of bright Reason come succours from Attribute,

The Attributes of the Essence of the Creator, who is lord of "Be and it was."

(b) Emanation and Ecstasy.

۱ يك گوهري چو بيضا جوشيد و گشت دريا

كف كرد و كف زمين شد وز دود او سما شد

۲ الحق نهان سپاهي پوشيده پادشاهي

هر لحظه حمله آورد آنكه باصل وا شد

¹ The region of formless matter (Not-being), in which the phenomenal world is reflected.

² Absolute Being.

³ The Neo-platonists represent God as a circle, but the poet may be thinking of the centrifugal devolution by which Being is communicated (cf. Plotinus, Enneades, i. 7. 1).

⁴ For مدد see vi. ۱۲, note.

⁵ The νοῦς of Plotinus, the λόγος of Philo.

⁶ Cf. Enneades, iii. 5. 9.

- ۳ گَرچه ز ما نِهان شُد در عالمی روان شُد
 تا نیستش نخوانی اَکَر از نظر جُدا شُد
 ۴ هر حالتی چو تیراست اندر کمانِ قالب
 زد در نِشانهٔ خویش کُر از کمان رها شُد
 ۵ گَرچه صَدَف ز ساحلِ قطره رُبود و کُمر شُد
 در بحر جوید اورا غَوّاص کَاشنا شُد
 ۶ آنکه ز عالمِ جان آمد سِپاهِ انسان
 عقلش وزیر گُشت و دل رفت و پادشا شُد
 ۷ تا بعد چند گاهی دل یادِ شهرِ جان کُرد
 وَا گُشت جُمْلَه لشکرِ درِ عالمِ فنا شُد
 ۸ کُتوئی چگونِه باشد آمد شُد معانی
 اینک بوقتِ خُفتنِ بِنِگَرِ گِرِه کُشا شُد

(T. 162. 4^a).

The one Substance boiled, like an egg, and became the Sea²;

It foamed, and the foam became Earth, and from its spray arose the Sky.

In truth, a hidden army with a viewless king
 Continually makes an onset, and then returns to its home.
 Tho' it be hidden from us, it moves in the world;
 Do not call it non-existent, tho' it be out of sight.

¹ T. has از عالمی جُدا شُد, where عالمی seems to have come from the line above. The reading in the text is that of B².

² XIX. ۷.

Every instant there is, so to speak, an arrow in the bow of the body :

If it escapes from the bow, it strikes its mark.

Tho' the shell stole a drop from the shore¹ and vap'ished,
The diver that is a friend² (of God) seeks it in the sea.
Then from the spiritual world the army of Man descended, Reason was³ its vizier, and the Soul went forth and became king.

At last, after a while, the Soul remembered the spiritual city :

The whole army turned back and entered the world of death.

'How,' you may ask, 'is the coming and going of ideas?'
Lo, consider the time of sleep⁴—it solves the difficulty.

C. *The Sleep of Phenomenal Existence*⁴.

بجَنبِ بر خَورِ آخِرِ که چاشتگاه رسید
از آنکه خفته چو جنبید خواب شد مهجور
مگو که خفته نیمِ ناظِرِم بَصْنَعِ خُدا
نظر بَصْنَعِ حجابست از چنان منظور
روانِ خفته اگر داندی که در خوابست
از آنچه دیدی نی خوش شدی و نی رنجور
(T. 32. 2).

² For the double meaning of آشنا (friend, swimmer or swimming) cf. x. 3, note.

³ xxxix. 9, note.

⁴ Cf. xxxvi. 5, note.

⁵ T. reads خَوَد. But چاشتگاه points to خَور, and خورشید occurs in the preceding couplet.

Come, move towards the Sun, for morning has arrived,
Because, when the sleeper moves, sleep is banished.
Do not say, 'I am not asleep, I am regarding the work of God':

Viewing the work is a veil over the Object of vision.
If the sleeping spirit knew itself to be asleep,
Whatever it might see, it would feel neither joy nor sorrow.

D. The Theory of Ideas.

زاده از اندیشه‌های خوبِ تو ولدان و حور
زاده از اندیشه‌های زشتِ تو دیوِ کلان
سرّ و اندیشه مهندس بین شده قصر و سرا
سرّ تقدیر از لرا بین شده چندین جهان
(T. 53. 5^a).

From thy good thoughts are born the boys of Paradise
and the houris,
From thy evil thoughts is born the great demon (Iblis)².
See how the secret thought of the geometrician has become a castle or a palace,
See how the hidden Providence without beginning has become this mighty universe.

E. *The Strife of the Elements towards Unity*³.

هر چار عنصرند درین دیک هم بجوش
نه خاک بر قرار و نه نار و نمر و هوا

² It is well known that, according to Zoroaster, the souls of the pious after death are met by their own good thoughts, good words, and good deeds in the form of a beautiful maiden, whereas a vile and hideous woman represents to the souls of the wicked their evil thoughts, evil words, and evil deeds. This notion occurs repeatedly in Zoroastrian literature. See e.g. The Book of Ardā Virāf, pp. 167 and 311.

³ Cf. Magnavi, 290, 8 seqq.

گُهِ خَاكِ در لِبَاسِ گُیا رفته از هَوَس
 گُهِ آبِ خُود هوا شُده از بهرِ این و لا
 از راهِ اِتِّحَادِ شُده آبِ آتشی.
 آتش شُده ز عشقِ هوا هَر درین فضا
 ارکانِ بخانه خانه بگُشته چو بیدقی
 از بهرِ عشقِ شاه نه از لهو چون شُما
 ای بیخبر بَرُو که تُرْ آبِ رُوشنی است
 تا وا رهد ز آبِ و گُلتِ صَفَوَتِ صفا
 زیراکه طَالِبِ صِفَتِ صَفَوَتِ آبِ
 و آن نیست جُز وصالِ تو با قُلُومِ ضِیا
 (T. 10. 6^a).

All the four elements are seething in this caldron (the world),

None is at rest, neither earth nor fire nor water nor air.

Now earth takes the form of grass, on account of desire,

Now water becomes air, for the sake of this affinity.

By way of unity water becomes fire,

Fire also becomes air in this expanse, by reason of love.

The elements wander from place to place, like a pawn,

For the sake of the King's love, not, like you, for pastime.

Go, ignorant one, for thine is a bright water (a divine principle),

That the quintessence of purity (the soul) may escape from thy water and clay (thy body);

Because the water seeks the quality of quintessence,

Which is nought but thy union with the sea of Light.

F. Historical and Autobiographical allusions. As one might expect, these are very few. The following list, though not absolutely complete, contains the most important. I should say that in compiling it I have used only the Tabriz edition of the Dīvān.

- (a) به یاد و بود مُحَمَّد نگر که چون باقی است
ز بعد ششصد و پنجاه سخت بُنیادست

(T. 138. 3).

Behold, how enduring is the memory and existence of Mohammed!

He is firmly established after six hundred and fifty years¹.

- (b) مرا واجب کُند کُرمَن برون آیم چو کُل از تن
که عُمَر شد بشصت و من چو شین و سین درین شستم
(T. 242. 8').

It behoves me to come forth, like a rose, from the body,
For my years are at sixty, and I am as 'shīn' and 'sīn' in this 'shast'.²

- (c) باندیشه فرو بُرد مرا عقل چهل سال
بشصت و دو شدم صَید و ز تدبیر بجستم
(T. 244. 1).

Forty years did Reason plunge me in care,
At three score and two I was made a prey and eschewed
(worldly) meditation³.

¹ Either 650 A.H. or 661 A.H., according as we reckon from the Prophet's flight (Hijra) or from his death.

² Probably the meaning is: 'I am entangled (alluding to the shape of the letters ش and س) in this net (the phenomenal world).'

³ This couplet is discussed in the Introduction.

(d) خاقان اُردو خان اکثر از جان نگرده ایل من
 من پادشاه کِشورم بر خیل و بر اُردو زمر
 (T. 255. 7^a).

Unless Khāqān Urdū Khān¹ becomes my devoted subject,
 I am sovereign of the land, I will charge on (his) cavalry and camp.

(e) بر رافِضی چئونِه ز بنی قُحافِه لافِم
 بر خارِجی چئونِه غمِ بو تُرابِ کُومِ
 (T. 260. 7).

How should I boast of the Banū Kuḥāfa² to a Shī'ite?
 How should I relate the woes of Bū Turāb ('Alī) to a Khārijite?

(f) تو بدان خُداى بِنِگَر که صد اِعتقادِ بخشد
 ز چه سُنّی است مروی ز چه رافِضی است قُنْبی
 (T. 355. 7).

Look thou on the God who bestows a hundred forms of creed:

Why is the man of Marv a Sunnī, why is the man of Kum⁴ a Shī'ite?

¹ Probably the reference is to Halākū Khān, who overthrew the Caliphate (656 A.H.). For اُردو see Herbelot, Bibliothèque Orientale, Vol. iv. p. 296 seq.

² The mention of this tribe recalls Abū Bekr, whose father was Abū Kuḥāfa. As is well known, the Shī'ites do not acknowledge the first three Caliphs.

³ The original Khārijites rebelled against 'Alī in the year 37 A.H.
 (Mure, Annals of the Early Caliphate, Ch. XL.). Afterwards, the name was given to a number of sects.

⁴ Kum lies half-way between Teherān and Kāshān. Its inhabitants, Shī'ites almost without exception, were regarded as desperately fanatical. See Barbier de Meynard, Dictionnaire de la Perse, p. 459.

Of the famous Sūfis who lived before him Jalālu'ddīn mentions Maṣṣūr Ḥallāj and Bāyazīd frequently; also Ibn Adham (T. 28. 2^a). Among the poets Nizāmī (T. 136. 6^a), Ḥanā'ī (T. 175. 3^a), and Harīrī (T. 337. 9^a). Other celebrated names are Abū Ḥanīfa and Shāfi'ī (T. 139. 9^a), Akhfash (T. 216. 3), Kisā'ī (T. 109. 7^a), and Plato (T. 303. 7; 349. 9). For 'Alī see xvi. 11, note.

In T. 93. 10 we find a proverbial expression = 'carrying coals to Newcastle':

ببصره چون کُشم خرما بکِرمāن چون برم زیره

How should I take a load of dates to Baṣra or bring cumin to Kirmān!

APPENDIX II.

Translations in Verse. My aim has been, without departing from the sense, to reproduce, as far as possible, the passion and melody of the Persian. The arrangement of the rhymes in (c) and (d) corresponds to that of the original: a closer imitation could not be attempted, owing to fundamental differences of metrical system.

(a) VII.

He comes, a moon whose like the sky ne'er saw, awake or dreaming,
Crowned with eternal flame no flood can lay.
Lo, from the flagon of thy love, O Lord, my soul is swimming,
And ruined all my body's house of clay!
When first the Giver of the grape my lonely heart befriended,
Wife fired my bosom and my veins filled up,
But when his image all mine eye possessed, a voice descended:
'Well done, O sovereign Wine and peerless Cup!'
Love's mighty arm from roof to base each dark abode is hewing
Where chinks reluctant catch a golden ray.
My heart, when Love's sea of a sudden burst into its viewing,
Leaped headlong in, with 'Find me now who may!'
As, the sun moving, clouds behind him run,
All hearts attend thee, O Tabrîz's Sun!

(b) XII.

Poor copies out of heaven's original,
 Pale earthly pictures mouldering to decay,
 What care altho' your beauties break and fall,
 When that which gave them life endures for aye!

O never vex thine heart with idle woes:
 All high discourse enchanting the rapt ear,
 All gilded landscapes and brave glistering shows
 Fade—perish, but it is not as we fear

While far away the living fountains ply,
 Each petty brook goes brimful to the main.
 Since brook nor fountain can forever die,
 Thy fears how foolish, thy lament how vain!

What is this fountain, wouldst thou rightly know?
 The Soul whence issue all created things.
 Doubtless the rivers shall not cease to flow,
 Till silenced are the everlasting springs.

Farewell to sorrow, and with quiet mind
 Drink long and deep: let others fondly deem
 The channel empty they perchance may find,
 Or fathom that unfathomable stream.

The moment thou to this low world wast given,
 A ladder stood whereby thou mightst aspire;
 And first thy steps, which upward still have striven,
 From mineral mounted to the plant: then higher

To animal existence: next, the Man,
 With knowledge, reason, faith. O wondrous goal!
 This body, which a crumb of dust began—
 How fairly fashioned the consummate whole!

Yet stay not here thy journey: thou shalt grow
 An angel bright and home far off in heaven.
 Plod on, plunge last in the great Sea, that so
 Thy little drop make oceans seven times seven.

‘The Son of God!’ Nay, leave that word unsaid,
 Say, ‘God is One, the pure, the single Truth.’
 What tho’ thy frame be withered, old, and dead,
 If the soul save her fresh immortal youth?

(c) XXXI. 1—4.

Lo, for I to myself am unknown, now in God’s name
 what must I do?
 I adore not the Cross nor the Crescent, I am not a Giaour nor a Jew.
 East nor West, land nor sea is my home, I have kin nor with angel nor gnome,
 I am wrought not of fire nor of foam, I am shaped not of dust nor of dew.
 I was born not in China afar, not in Sagsin and not in Bulghār;
 Not in India, where five rivers are, nor ‘Irāq nor Khorāsān
 I grew.
 Not in this world nor that world I dwell, not in Paradise,
 neither in Hell;
 Not from Eden and Rizwān I fell, not from Adam my lineage I drew.
 In a place beyond uttermost Place, in a tract without shadow of trace,
 Soul and body transcending, I live in the soul of my Loved One anew!

(d) XXXVI. 1—4.

Up, O ye lovers, and away! ’Tis time to leave the world for ‘aye.

Hark, loud and clear from heaven the drum of parting calls—let none delay!

The cameleer hath risen amain, made ready all the camel-train,

And quittance now desires to gain: why sleep ye, travellers, I pray?

Behind us and before there swells the din of parting and
of bells;

To shoreless Space each moment sails a disembodied spirit away.

From yonder starry lights and through those curtainawnings darkly blue

Mysterious figures float in view, all strange and secret things display.

From this orb, wheeling round its pole, a wondrous slumber o'er thee stole:

O weary life that weighest nought, O sleep that on my soul dost weigh!

O heart, toward thy heart's love wend, and O friend, fly toward the Friend,

Be wakeful, watchman, to the end: drowse seemingly no watchman may.

(e) XLIV. †—v.

Why wilt thou dwell in mouldy cell, a captive, O my heart?

Speed, speed the flight! a nursling bright of yonder world thou art.

He bids thee rest upon his breast, he flings the veil away:
Thy home wherefore make evermore this mansion of decay?
O contemplate thy true estate, enlarge thyself, and rove
From this dark world, thy prison, whirled to that celestial grove.

O honoured guest in Love's high feast, O bird of the angel-sphere,

'Tis cause to weep, if thou wilt keep thy habitation here.

A voice at morn to thee is borne—God whispers to the soul—

'If on the way the dust thou lay, thou soon wilt gain the goal.'

That road be thine toward the Shrine! and lo, in bush and briar,

The many slain by love and pain in flower of young desire,
Who on the track fell wounded back and saw not, ere
the end,

A ray of bliss, a touch, a kiss, a token of the Friend!

TABLE SHOWING WHERE THE SELECTED POEMS OCCUR IN OTHER EDITIONS OF THE DĪVĀN

The first number refers to the page, the second to the couplet with which the poem commences. When 'a' is affixed, it denotes that the couplet in question is printed in the margin of the text. Thus T. 7. 12^a is the twelfth couplet, counted from the top, in the margin of page 7 of the Tabriz Edition. *
